THAW'S TRIAL LACKED LAW, DIGNITY, ORDE

U.S. Have no Practical Legal System -Time Saved and Juries Trusted in England.

LONDON, April 13.—There was in direct reference to the Thaw trial a New York at the opening of the Guild ford quarter sessions to-day.

The recorder, George Cave, M.P., in charging the grand jury, said the British were apt to congratulate themselves on comparing the English and American criminal systems. Counsel in this country were disposed to save the time of the court and there was a great tradition that prosecuting counsel should not struggle to obtain a conviction. The British trusted their juries more than did the Americans.
The recorder added that he hoped that the proposed criminal appeal court would not give the rich an advantage over the poor.

The time consumed in the Thaw trial, compared to the rapidity and exactness of English justice as illustrated in the case of Rayner, the murderer of William Whiteley, in which the court confined the lawyers and witnesses to actual facts connected with the crime, and comparisons between American methods, which are declared to be melodramatic in the extreme, and what is alleged to be the more dignified procedure of the English bar," form the basis of the comment in the papers this morning.

The papers publish long editorial articles, and most of them review the various stages of the trial. It is declared that American prestige has suffered severely and the case is called a "signal proof of the utter in-efficacy of American statesmanship to evolve a practical legal system." One paper says: "Law, dignity, com-mon sense and order, all have been wanting," while another declares, "A strong English judge would have made

The dedicatory ceremonies in connection with St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, at Bloor and Markhamstreets, were conducted yesterday morning in the presence of a large gathering of members of the new con- urday, after a 46-minute conference gregation and of others interested in the service. The dedicatory services were conducted by Archbishop O'Connor, assisted by Father Staley, St. Michael's Father O'Donnell, St. Mary's Church; Father Doyle, St. Patrick's Church; Father Roche, St. Michael's College; Father Minehan, the rector, and Mr. O'Neill. There were present. also, Father Barrett of St. Patrick's and Father Hand of St. Paul's.

The ceremonies, which were of strikingly impressive character, began with a procession of choristers, chanters and clergy around the side aisles. the 50th Psalm being chanted. Having completed the course and returned to the portals, Archbishop O'Connor gave dedicatory prayer, and the ceremony of pronouncing a blessing on the church was followed by high mass, celebrated by Father Stacey.

Ceremonies Conducted by Arch- Defendant Authorizes Statement That He Has Not Changed His Counsel-No Fixed Program.

> NEW YORK, April 14.—Setting at rest all rumors as to their present intentions, J. Russell Peabody, associated with Delphin M. Delmas, chief counsel for Harry K. Thaw, said late Satwith the prisoner, that an application with the prisoner, that an application for Thaw's release on bail would be made.

As to what steps would be taken he declined to say. There were various rumors during the day that habeas corpus proceedings might be brought, and it was said that the Thaw family stands ready to furnish bail in almost any amount to secure the young man's release.

District Attorney Jerome announced that he would vigorously oppose granting of bail to the prisoner, and added that he intended to prosecute him for murder in the first degree. This latter assertion was in reply to a suggestion that he had compromised with the defendant's counsel on a plea of insanity, and would agree to send Thaw to Mattake with it fail to give is Territorial Organization.

A somewhat sensational development was the publication of a letter said to have been written by Howard Nesbit, Evelyn Thaw's brother, explaining his position in the case, and asking for money from Thaw.

OPPOSED BY LORD ROBERTS

As President of National Service League, "Bobs" Sends Out a Criticism of the Plan.

The World has received a letter from The National Service League of London, England, and signed by Field Marshal Roberts, president; Duke of Wellington, Earl of Meath, Lord Milner and Viscount Rag-lan, vice-presidents, saying: Mr. Haldane's scheme for a national army has now been before the country long mough to enable a view to be taken of it as a whole, and an opinion formed as to the extent to which it will meet our military needs. As president and vice-presidents of the National Service League, we ask you to allow us space for a brief consideration of its merits and shortcomings. At the outset we desire to say that we approach the scheme in no captious or unfriendly spirit. We recognize to the full he great ability, the earnestness, and the single-mindedness with which the secretary of state for war has carried out his diffcult task. Before formulating his proposals he has given long and careful study to the question; he has consulted representatives of all the maitary forces of the crown, and he has been assisted by the best military advice—advice however, which, it must not be forgotten, was conditioned by the desire to reduce expenditure and the refusal to depart from the principle of voitnersy enlistment for the national army. Mcreover, Mr. Haidane has nad the clearness of view to see and the courage to the ness of view to see, and the courage to de-chire, that the problem before him was "the problem of a nation in arms with all the forces of the country welded into one" which, as he truly said, was "the only safe-guard for the public interests should war break out." break out."

We do not think it unfair to assume that proposals produced under these conditions repusent the best that can be obtained under a system of voluntary endstmeat, Let us see what this best is. What will it give us, and what will it fail to give is?

Territorial Organization.

Rev. I her Roche delivered an eloquent as in which he made a strong and mpassioned plea for truth in social and political, as well as in the religious, life of a nation. Truth was divine, coming from God, and bearing His impress.

The next interesting development was when Mr. Peabody left Thaw after a late visit, and said in reply to questions at the field, the only troops, be it remembered, which a home defence army would be called as to stories that Thaw had changed his counsel:

"Mr. Thaw authorizes me to say, that which would go far towards fitting the ferritorial troops for this duty, is to be given

"Mr. Thaw authorizes me to say, that up to the present time he has made no change of counsel. You may say that as emphatically as you please. Of course, we don't know what will transpire next week."

"How does Mr. Thaw take the situation?" the lawyer was asked.
"He is very much distressed and feels very badly about it," Mr. Peabody replied.

Asked about the program for next week, he said:
"We have no fixed program. On Monday we shall get together and decide what is best to be done."

Mr. Thaw authorizes me to say, that which would go far towards fitting the territorial troops for this duty, is to be given after the crisis is on us, not in anticipation of it. Can this be called in any sense an army? An army which requires six months before it can act is not an army. It is imply an armed crowd.

It is to be observed that the faults we have just pointed out in the new system are independent of the question whether or not the secretary of state for war will get the men he asks for. It is needless to say that grave doubt exists on this point. Be this as it may, it is impossible not to see that under Mr. Haldane's proposals, as indeed under any that rest on voluntary engrement to perform a national duty, the one class that is favored is that of the pleasure-seeking and the self-indulgent. Every Destructive criticism is, however, easy. It will naturally be asked what we propose in place of the scheme which we are criticising. At the risk of trespassing son what on your space, we destre to give a very short outline of what it is that the National Service League asks for—an outline which we hope shortly to supplement by a program entering into all necessary details.

And we are equally in agreement with the principle that the national army should be properly that the national army should be properly organized in divisions, brigades and the other necessary military formations, with the due proportions between the various aims and services, and with proper equipment. This is, indeed, a fundamental requisite, what we do not agree with, what we can never accept, is the idea that a certain number of isolated drills in the year, and eight, or even fifteen, days in camp, will give the country a force which will be within measurable distance of being equal, either to meeting foreign troops in defence of these islands, or to supplying efficient reinforcements for the regular army when employed on a great war abroad.
