counts of the progress of Agricultural labour in our of and Sister Provinces are highly encouraging; and the map, especially of Potatoes, are both abundant and in blest possible condition. To witness the exuberant not, leturning manifold the seed committed to its bostom is extremely gradifying and demands of us, that a good so diversal in its application, should be received with the patitude so justly due to the Great Author, and preserve of our existence, and cobstrain us to express our acts wiedgments to the liberal donor.

Wemple has afforded the most unequivocal and can one proofs of his astonishing and almost incredible wer in effecting perfect cures of the habit of stamment; and the facility with which his popils can converse, of itself a most ondeniable argument, that this invet its explain the presence of which was exhibited his Office, and in the presence of many individuals, inne person of Zebulon Jones, who from being a noted annuary for a great many years, (as will appear by a Criffiche to that effect, in another part of this days paper, is, in the space of a few days been made to converse and reelly and surelligibly as if he had never been miced with any impediment.

The amusing and lively remarks, of our friend "Blue No.", came too late for insertion.—It will meet with due attention in our nest; in the mean time we would request the continuance of his correspondence.

STAMMERING.

THIS Certifies that I ZABULON JONES, aged 40 years, have been afflicted with a most obstinate stammering from my infancy, and at times I was so bad, as to render my speech altogether unintelligible, after having attended Mr. Wemple's Institution three days, I can speak and read with ease and fluency, and consider myself perfectly free from all impediment. I am also fully persuaded, from the principle on which I was cured, that no relapse of my impediment can take place. I would earnestly recommend persons who are afflicted in the same way, to put them-selves under his care, as I am persuaded that on the part of the pupil, nothing is necessary but a strict observance of his rules to ensure a speedy ZABULON JONES.
