A RIGID LAW AGAINST RADICALS

Would Deport All Alien I. W. W. Leaders—Defines Extremism and Forces Action by the U. S. Department of Labor—Ten Bills Considered.

Washington, Dec. 20.—A bill defining radicalism and designed primarily, Chairman Johnson said, to force the department of labor to arrest and deport all alien members of the I. W. W. and kindred organizations has been reported to the house today by the immigration committee.

Under the bill any alien who is a member, contributes to, loans money to or is affiliated with any organization teaching, advocating or forwarding the teaching of abotage, the overthrow of organized government, the killing or assault upon any government official, or the unlawful damage to or destruction of property, would be liable to arrest and deportation.

No overt act must be proved in order to bring about deportation, as the bill provides that mere membership in or affiliation with radical organizations shall be a deportable offense.

Explaining that the purpose of the measure was to make the letter and intent of the law plain and unmistakable, Representative Johnson introduced letters and records to show that Secretary Wilson could not, under existing law, mere membership in the I. W. W. did not constitute grounds for arrest and deportation.

Ten bills aimed at immediate suppression of all forms of radical activity in the United States were considered today by the house judiciary committee, which expected to begin work immediately on a measure co-ordinating the provisions of the bills and incorporating the ideas of individual members of the committee.

Representative Blanton, Democrat, Texas, charged officials of the department of labor with sympathy with the radical movement and urged that the entire department from Secretary Wilson down is so honeycombed and permeated with the spirit of treason that you have got to have a housecleaning there before you can get at the bottom of the matter.

MR. ASQUITH ON LIBERALISM

Potency to Solve Social Problems—Ireland's Future—Speaks of "Government Blunder."

(London Chronicle.)
Mr. Asquith, in the course of a speech at the meeting of the Council of the National Liberal Federation at Birmingham yesterday, said the party truce was now over. He might be mistaken, but he seemed to sniff in the air some signs of preparation for the great battle in which they would very soon be called upon to take part.

He assured them of his conviction of the potency of Liberalism to solve our social evils and round off our political freedom and to find a way to the settlement of the great economic and industrial problems that lay before us.

Later, the ex-premier addressed a great public meeting in Birmingham town hall.

Mr. Asquith, who had an enthusiastic reception, said the outstanding factor in the domestic politics of the last few months has been the experiment of governing the country by a "Party-Liberal" coalition.

The Independent Liberals who went to the House of Commons were in numbers a mere remnant, but a remnant which, under the resourceful and sagacious leadership of Sir Donald Maclean, had shown itself a force not to be despised.

He did this experiment look in the light of twelve months' experience? He might say something of the deplorable fiasco of the way in which questions of the greatest moment were almost habitually thrown on the floor of the House of Commons by the government, which dared not announce a policy or give a lead of its own.

Take the case of premium bonds. If there ever was a question on which the government ought to have a mind of its own it was the case with that proposal. The House of Commons was in numbers a mere remnant, but a remnant which, under the resourceful and sagacious leadership of Sir Donald Maclean, had shown itself a force not to be despised.

Mr. Asquith, in the course of a speech at the meeting of the Council of the National Liberal Federation at Birmingham yesterday, said the party truce was now over. He might be mistaken, but he seemed to sniff in the air some signs of preparation for the great battle in which they would very soon be called upon to take part.

DEAD AT AGE OF ONE HUNDRED

(Bathurst Northern Light.)
Within halting distance of the spot on which nearly ninety years ago, she first set foot on Canadian soil, Mrs. Anna Chalmers, the grand old lady of Bellefleur, Gloucester county, N. B., was laid to rest in the little Presbyterian churchyard, overlooking the Bay of Chaleur, on Monday, 16th December.

Only four brief months ago she celebrated her hundredth birthday, on which occasion, in glowing health and spirits she was the recipient of the heartfelt congratulations of all who knew her; for her's was truly a life spent in service and devotion. But with the advent of the fall weather came her first sickness in life and it proved to be the last; also; yet the tardy reaper was kind, for she preserved all her faculties to the end, and the mould of her cheek in death was a wonder to behold.

When a little girl of thirteen years Ann Galbraith (her maiden name) immigrated from West Kilbride, Ayrshire, Scotland, with her parents and other families of Scottish weavers bent upon forcing the reluctant hand of fortune in the Dominion of Canada.

Pictou, N. S., was the objective of the party; but their little cart, the Margaret Ritchie, encountered such severe storms when nearing the completion of the voyage that she drifted up the Bay of Chaleur with the result that the rendezvous was changed and a landing was made at the point afterwards called Bellefleur. And it was there amid all the rigors of early Canadian settlement that the girl grew to womanhood and spent her magnificent life.

The deceased was born in West Kilbride on August 16, 1819, the same year as Queen Victoria. She married James Chalmers, who had preceded her from Scotland, in the town of Bathurst, N. B. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Geo. McDonnell and it was the only one recorded in the town.

There were ten children born of it marriage, and of these four are now living, namely: James Chalmers, Bellefleur; Mrs. Andrew Adams, Campbellton; Mrs. Wm. Craig, Charlottetown; and Mrs. Elizabeth Chalmers, Vancouver. These four are supplemented by no less than fifty grand and great grand children. Her husband died in 1860.

Rev. A. D. Archibald, of the Presbyterian church, Bathurst, conducted the funeral services and paid fitting and generous tribute to the splendid qualities of heart and mind that had distinguished the deceased lady throughout her extraordinary span of life.

The six pall-bearers were grand-children of the deceased. Their names follow: James Craig, Charlottetown; Gordon Craig, Charlottetown; Ernest Adams, Charlottetown; James Adams, Charlottetown; Gordon Chalmers, Bathurst; and Harold Chalmers, Bellefleur.

FOUR POISONED BY GAS.
Woman, Two Children and Nurse Found Dead.
New York, Dec. 22.—Monoxide gas poisoning caused the death of four persons, whose bodies were found at the home of Roger Berdoun, at Sheephead Bay, according to Edward Martin, medical examiner for Kings county, who investigated the tragedy.

TO CHECK RISING PRICE OF CLOTHES

Conference in Washington Early in January, to Investigate Situation.

Washington, Dec. 23.—Steps to check the rising price of clothing were discussed at a conference here early in January of persons interested in the production of raw materials to the consumer of the finished product.

The callings of the conference was announced by Assistant Attorney-General Figg, who said that in addition to effecting economies in operation it was planned to provide for the production of standard quality cloth and garments for sale at a reasonable price as an inducement to the public to check extravagance in purchasing.

Suggestions for the conference came from producers of wearing apparel and a committee of fifteen is being chosen, the personnel of which will be announced after the Christmas holidays. The amalgamated clothing unions will be represented in the conference.

Mr. Figg said it was generally agreed among producers that the type of clothing purchasable by the average man. Some clothing manufacturers were said to believe that men's suits now selling at $55 retail could be sold at a profit for $25 if an arrangement could be worked out between mills, manufacturers and retailers whereby a certain percentage of business could be devoted to goods of standard quality to be turned out in quantity.

IRISH PROBLEM

Of Ireland's long record of misunderstanding and lost opportunities there was nothing more fatal than the position of the government. The government seized the opportunity of the blunder of the first magnitude. On the morrow of the presentation of the report of the convention, when the onus for a fair and equitable settlement were favorable, the government proposed to apply military conscription to Ireland, and there commenced a period of military government enforced by an army of occupation.

The office of Lord Lieutenant was entrusted to a field marshal, who, so far as the world knows, had not any qualifications except such distinctions as he won on the battlefield.

The hopes arising out of the convention were ruinously wrecked. The constitutional party led by Mr. Redmond had been gradually, but surely, gaining its authority in Ireland, but the government policy had resulted in Sinn Fein becoming the dominating factor in Irish national life. The government had now given the country a further shock in the proclamation of Sinn Fein. In a word we were back to the worst days of coercion under veiled and unashamed. What a letter of introduction to Home Rule!

But Not Too Good.
"Why did you ask those people to wait, Marie?"
"I wanted to see if you were in, Madam."
