"What can I do for my skin-tortured baby? How many worried, worried mothers, whose children are suffering with eczema, lacer or other torturing, distressing humor, have asked themselves this question? Through neglect or improper treatment, some minor eruption has developed into a distressing and unsightly affliction. Simple treatments fail, and stronger ones are tried, sometimes so harsh that the suffering is increased rather than alleviated. Even professional aid has proven useless, and the dear little creature, that should be smiling and becoming chubby, remains the child's future into a nightmare of physical and mental misery.

ON OVERDOING IT

"The tendency of the age," says a modern philosopher, "is to overdo everything." The New Encyclopaedia Britannica (11th Edition) AND THE University of Cambridge.

Report of a speech delivered by the late President of the British Academy at a dinner given in London last Autumn by the Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, on the undertaking by the University of the New Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

In proposing the toast of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the late Mr. S. H. Butcher (President of the British Academy and M.P. for Cambridge University) said:

Lord Rayleigh, your Excellency, my Lords, and gentlemen The great honour has been done me of asking me to propose the toast of the Encyclopaedia Britannica this evening. I should just like to mention to you that I am not a person of any large multifarious learning myself, and I do not in any way feel encyclopaedic. (Laughter.) I do not know why, but I have always felt a little shy about encyclopaedic knowledge, partly, perhaps because some of the articles I have had to read—various Greek of the earliest times—have told me that much learning does not bring wisdom. I am not a person of any large multifarious learning myself, and I do not in any way feel encyclopaedic. (Laughter.) I do not know why, but I have always felt a little shy about encyclopaedic knowledge, partly, perhaps because some of the articles I have had to read—various Greek of the earliest times—have told me that much learning does not bring wisdom.

which I am now President, the British Academy, there are no less than 57 contributors, considerably more than half of the whole of the members. (Cheers.) I would just like to say that the British Academy represents all those branches of learning which do not come within the range of the Royal Society itself; that is to say, it represents what one may call the humanistic subjects treated by scientific methods—ancient and modern history, philology, including literature, language, classical, Semitic, modern law, jurisprudence and general philosophy, political economy and other subjects. Some of the very best men in each one of these subjects are to be found among the new contributors to the new Encyclopaedia Britannica. I also observe that there are no limits to the nationality in the selection of writers. We have in that distinguished 1,500 or more men from the United States, some from Canada, some from Japan, and others from Germany, France, Italy, Holland, and even Japan. That seems to me another great merit of the Encyclopaedia, that those who have planned that book and carried it through to completion have done so inspired with the progressive spirit of science, having devoted to every branch of knowledge the kind of spirit which many of you would naturally feel might belong only to the more rapidly advancing forms of physical science. (Cheers.)

The New (11th) Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica is a Fresh and Original Survey of Human Thought, Learning and Achievements in 1910. A complete and Authoritative Exposition of Knowledge. It consists of 28 Volumes and Index, Comprising 27,000 Pages and 40,000 Articles, and Will Supercede and Displace All Previous Editions and Unauthorized and Garbled American Reprints.

A Revolution in Publishing

The Use of India (or Bible) Paper Reduces the Bulky Volume of Previous Edition to a Slender, Flexible Volume Only One Inch Thick.

This radical departure from the traditions of 140 years has been justified. The public has quickly set the stamp of its approval upon the India paper format. The ponderous volumes which have been replaced by volumes so light that one of them can be held comfortably in the hand. When open the book lies flat. The paper, although so light, is opaque, and stronger than ordinary book paper heretofore used. It gives an ideal printing surface. The entire set of 29 volumes weighs about 80 pounds, as compared with a weight of about 240 pounds in the ordinary paper edition. The Encyclopaedia Britannica, more comprehensive and better arranged than ever, is the new format becomes many times more valuable to its owner, because it can be read readily and systematically without fatigue.

In view of the extraordinary demand for the new (11th) edition, it is apparent that all preliminary estimates of the probable size of the advance-of-publication sale will have to be disregarded. It is now confidently expected that 40,000 orders will be received by June next 90 per cent. of the subscribers have selected the India paper edition and the preference for the Full Sheep Binding has also been made clear. The success of the new format is therefore assured.

Canadian subscribers will be supplied with copies of the English Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica and not at that which for purposes of copyright had to be printed in the United States. The work will be delivered from England, carriage and duty paid to Toronto.

Subscriptions at substantial concessions in price are now being accepted in advance of publication. No remittance is asked for until delivery of the volumes.

APPLICATION FOR THE PROSPECTUS. Full particulars of prices (in advance of publication), of deferred payments, bookcases and bindings, together with a prospectus containing an account of the work, with specimen pages, order forms, etc., free on application.
