KINGS COUNTY POLITICS.

The liberal organization in Kings county has been badly beaten in the attempt to accomplish the task that is now undertaken by the party in St. John. The president of the Kings county liberal association called a convention and submitted a resolution substantially the same as that adopted at the liberal meeting held this week in this city. But in Kings county the liberal idea did not work. Not only did the resolution fail, but the liberal convention endorsed the choice of a conservative candidate on the Blair ticket. The influence of the local government was altogether too strong for Mr. Kinnear and those who share his opposition to private political trading. The solicitor general carried the convention, having first, it is charged, taken care that it should be packed by his friends for the purpose. Some doubt seems to have arisen as to whether the meeting was really a liberal convention. The point was raised several times, but could not be settled, owing to the inability of those present to determine what sort of man a liberal was.

So far as the proceedings have gone, Mr. White has met with success as a bargainer, and Mr. Fowler's opportunism has triumphed. But after all it is not certain that this kind of political traffic pays in the long run. We may take for what it is worth the pleasing little fiction that Mr. Fowler has changed sides from conviction, or, as Mr. White put it, that he is a repentant sinner. Mr. Fowler's intimation that his change of opinion is due to the improved administration brought about by Mr. White and Mr. Emmerson is contradicted by the circumstance that only a few weeks ago he was trying to form an opposition ticket. To his former supporters he has explained his defection by claiming that the only way he could get elected was by joining Mr. White's ticket. It is plain enough that Mr. Fowler's change of base is due to the fact that he thinks he can get elected easier and more cheaply as a member of the White combination than in opposition.

Mr. Fowler may have judged correctly in this matter. He has now in his favor the patronage and influence of the government. His running mate is a man of ample means, who has never yet failed of election. Mr. Fowler has a large circle of friends, and he may hope to strengthen the party which he has joined by holding the support of some of them. Then the defection of the recognized head of the opposition in the county throws the party into confusion, and makes organization so difficult that the government candidates would have some reason to hope for an unopposed return.

But does this justify Mr. Fowler? Was there nothing in his alleged opposition to the Blair government except a hope for election? Is there nothing genuine in his present defence of the ministry? Is public life no more to Mr. Fowler than a game in which the successful man is he who knows enough to join the party that offers him the best chance to get office? Mr. Fowler's answer to these questions is not the best one. In spite of the cynics, it remains the fact that there are such things as honest political beliefs and genuine motives.

There are some men still who can be believed when they condemn or commend certain politics. There are men who will not desert and betray their associates and go over to a stronger enemy. It would not be safe to say that these faithful men must fall. Political repentance may seem to Mr. Fowler to be nothing more than grasping a fatted calf. But it is possible that five years hence the opportunist may not be far ahead of the man who is willing to go to defeat for a cause that seems right to him.

And perhaps less than five years or five weeks may teach Mr. Fowler a lesson, that seems to be needed in more counties than Kings. These two have taken a great deal upon themselves, and both have offended the independent and self-respecting people of the constituency. At the convention yesterday there were ominous murmurings. More will be heard to-day, and possibly the calculations on which these political trades were made will be found singularly incorrect. At all events, it is too soon for Mr. White and Mr. Fowler to assume that they have silenced the people of both parties so that there is nothing more to be said.

THE OLD LISTS.

In a few weeks the revision of the provincial lists will be completed. The government has fixed the date of the election just early enough to make it necessary to use last year's lists and to disfranchise all men under twenty-two years of age. The only reason given for fixing this date is that if the election is postponed until the revised list is ready the campaign will take place in the early winter instead of in the pleasant autumn. On this point the Moncton Times observes that in 1890 the Blair government called the election in January when it might as well have been held in the autumn. And last year Carleton county was kept vacant through the session of the house and all the following spring, summer and autumn, in order that the government might bring on the election at midwinter. The Blair government seems to prefer the winter season for an election except when men can be disfranchised by an earlier poll.

THE DEBT.

The Telegraph, which has become more emphatically than ever a Blair organ, announces that the present government is not responsible for the increase of provincial debt. This is not correct. Hardly a dollar of the $1,000,000 which the existing government has added to the debt was an inherited obligation. Nearly the whole of the amount was expended in services for which the money was asked and voted since Mr. Blair became premier. The railways are nearly all Blair railways. The bridge contracts were all Blair contracts. The departmental buildings and the Woodstock bridge were not inherited jobs. The fact is that if the government had not incurred debt on its own account the debt of the province would be a million less than it is today.

Judge Girouard, lately member for Jacques Cartier, has the pleasure of reading nothing but good of himself. The opposition press vies with the liberal conservative papers in commending the independence, honesty and ability which Mr. Girouard has shown during his parliamentary life. It is not an admission, but a spontaneous expression of opinion that this prominent member of the liberal conservative party in the house of commons was a man of high purpose, of strong intellect and honorable methods. There is also a general agreement that no stronger judicial appointment could be made. If Mr. Girouard had remained in political life his political opponents would not have said these good things of him, but they would have thought them, as they do of other liberal conservative members who have not yet escaped calumny.

One of the busiest and most useful lives of modern times came to a close today that Pasteur died. Other men will arise who will know far more about bacteriology than Mr. Pasteur could have learned in another decade, but he will be honored as a most intelligent pioneer in a certain line of investigation and experiment.

THE CHIEFTAIN.

Here is one of the lyrics in the new opera, "The Chieftain," by Sir Arthur Sullivan, produced by Francis Wilson in New York last week.

The tinkling bells tell knells the parting day,
The flocks collect from meadow, hill and moor;
The happy goatherd homeward takes his way,
His wife and children meet him at the door.
To me the bells speak with no cheering tune,
Only the night wind sighs, "Alone! alone!"

Tinkle the bells upon the mountain steep,
Fainter and fainter down the narrow way,
Soon his old sheep, the shepherd, see he sleep,
Joins with his loved ones in their hymn of praise.
To me the bells speak with no cheering tone,
Only the night wind sighs, "Alone! alone!"

Sch. Hazelwood, Capt. Wagner, from Nathan, at New York, reports Sept. 14. Cause during a gale lost about 9,000 rats overboard.

HINTS DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

A cloudy sky and threatening rain, and the regatta in the harbor kept the attendance down to a pretty small number Thursday morning, but the bright, warm sun in the afternoon had the effect of sending people to the exhibition by hundreds, and well repaid indeed they were for coming, as they had a splendid chance to walk through the buildings and grounds and inspect the exhibits at their leisure. The horse and cattle parade took place in the ring on the Barracks green during the morning, and while it lasted was the centre of attraction. The cute little pigs and the fancy poultry came in for the lion's share on the part of the ladies, who flocked to the rows of sheds that run from the Agricultural hall towards Courtenay bay, and with skirts tucked up braved all the perils of the cattle yard. Citizens who were around the sheds were amazed at the familiarity displayed by so many ladies with the good points of horses and live stock, and some of them went home with a knowledge that they possessed when they started out after breakfast. The exhibition is truly an educator in more ways than one to the man who keeps his eyes and ears open.

The paid attendance Thursday was 5,121, which brings the grand total up to 51,121.

P. E. ISLAND CATTLE AND SHEEP.

Senator Ferguson of Prince Edward Island has every reason to be proud of the success that his exhibit of sheep and cattle has achieved. With 34 entries in this exhibition, he carried off 15 prizes and a diploma. "Tulloch Farm" has thus sustained the reputation it won at the recent exhibition at Charlottetown. The senator, who is an experienced breeder, goes in for Galloway cattle as the breed best adapted all round to the needs of the island. The Red Norfolks are of the same family. The Galloways are the oldest distinct breed of cattle in the United Kingdom, and were originally dun or grey in color, but for the last forty years the Scotch breeders have bred from black colored animals altogether. The Red Norfolks are of the same family, but the taste of the English breeders led them to breed a red variety. Reared on richer soil and in more fertile regions than the Galloways, the Red Norfolks are now the larger cattle. All Senator Ferguson's Galloways are of the black variety, and are low and thick, and that close to the body has the softness of silk. "I can get from $10 to $15 more for a Galloway hide," said the senator, "than for that of any other breed, so you see that is an important item in their favor." The Red Norfolks, which he before they are long stabled to realize this price, as when kept anything like a longer period under cover they injure the value of the hide by scratching off the hair in places. Then they are easy to feed and are better grazers than any other cattle of the same size. They can stay out later in the autumn, and will eat the coarsest grasses in the fields that the Ayreshires and Shorthorns will not touch. It therefore takes less land to pasture them. They do not have horns, which the eyes of many people is another great advantage. Their milk is as rich in quality as that of the Jerseys, and the yield is a good one in quantity. Senator Ferguson shows some magnificent looking specimens of these cattle, hinds, cows and heifers, which have attracted much more than ordinary attention.

In sheep he shows Shropshire Downs in quantity. One fine animal is a ram bought from Robert Davis at the Toronto exhibition, and another is the ram "Tartan," which he has just sold to W. W. Hubbard of Sussex. The Shropshires are hardy sheep, with a close, short wool that sheds the snow easily. So warm is their natural covering that they can sleep out of doors all night in a dry snowstorm without injury. In fact they prefer it to staying under cover. Some of the senator's sheep have had the average of 10 lbs. at a shearing. Senator Ferguson said the animals he brought here were, with three exceptions, not those shown at the recent Charlottetown exhibition, but were drafted from his farm. He could send along a third draft if necessary. He took 15 individual prizes at Charlottetown for sheep out of 18 entries, and 12 prizes out of 18 entries here—all that were offered in the class.

Talking of the sheep trade, Senator Ferguson said nothing could be worse than the manner in which Prince Edward Island conducted the business. Instead of selling their little lambs to the Americans at a very low figure, thereby sending away so much raw material, the farmers should feed them till they were yearlings and then send them to the English and West India markets, where they would bring remunerative prices. "Keep 'em" and grow less oats," was his motto. "I buy my oats now cheaper than I can raise them."

POULTRY APPLIANCES.

No appliances were shown. The judges, John M. B. Morrison and Robert M. Magee, report: "We would strongly recommend that in future no exhibitor be allowed to have his stock different from others, as the judges have experienced a lot of unnecessary trouble in judging this class on account of the exhibitor having his birds away from the others. Also, that a great many coops were so that the birds could not be taken out, and for that reason the judging was not as accurate as we could wish."
