CAN COLOR DIAMONDS.

Predictions of a time when the brown diamonds in the crown of King Edward, the Hope diamond and other famous gems of the kind can be practically duplicated at will were made today by W. Fuchs at a Chicago X-ray experiment station.

Mr. Fuchs announced the discovery of a process by which he is able to change a diamond to any color chosen and make such coloration permanent by the use of the Rotenagen rays.

The method consists in directing the X-ray through the substances from which the color is to be obtained before the rays touch and penetrate the diamond. Various metals and chemicals have been used to color the diamonds and it has been found that by reversing the method the color may also be removed.

It is thought by Mr. Fuchs that when he has completely perfected his experiments he will be able to bleach yellow diamonds with ease.

FORMER MONCTON WOMAN

LOSES REQUEST OF $1500.

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—Judge McKim, in the Suffolk probate court, has allowed the will and codicil of Mrs. Cynthia Perkins, of Roxbury. The codicil was objected to by Miss Christina Kidston formerly of Moncton, N. B., the nurse who was recently released by the grand jury from the charge of poisoning Mrs. Perkins. This codicil revoked a bequest of $1500, which the will made to Miss Kidston. The original document bears the date of 1901 and the codicil was made April 21 of this year. Miss Kidston contested on the ground that the deceased was of unsound mind.

ST. JOHN STAR.

ST. JOHN, N. B., SEPTEMBER 24, 1936.

CONVERTED AGAIN.

The astounding Telegraph has changed its policy again. This is the third time within a few months.

When Mr. Blair resigned last July, the Telegraph from being a firm supporter of the government, turned and became a rancorous critic. No epithet was too lofty to apply to the Patriot Blair, and none too severe for the government whose crazy policy had driven him out. Then there was silence for a while, followed by a flop the first of September, when it became again a firm supporter of the government.

Its editorial of Sept. 2nd referred to the Grand Trunk Pacific as a "mighty agent for the progress and prosperity of Canada," and called upon the liberal party to perfect "the most important national work ever undertaken in Canada."

It pledged itself anew to the service of the government, as against Mr. Blair and all such renegades, and stated its intention of following out its duty "in seeking to make the new transcontinental a mighty contributor to the progress and prosperity of that greater Canada, which commands the full allegiance of all good Canadians."

Then came another silence. For three long weeks not a word concerning the railway policy nor anything else pertaining to Canadian politics appeared in its editorial columns. But today with a suddenness surprising even to hardened Telegraph readers, comes another turn. The railway bill is "iniquitous," "mysterious," "an object of suspicion."

The government is informed that the protest of all Canada is registered against it, and that "the people are in earnest in their support of Mr. Blair in his opposition to the measure." Finally the senate is called upon to justify its existence and heed the popular demand by defeating the bill when it reaches the upper house.

"The bill before becoming law must have the endorsement of the senate," says the Telegraph, "and the plain people who pay the bills are trusting to that body to prevent this political outrage being consummated."

A light upon the cause of this sudden re-awakening of the Telegraph's conscience is thrown by the announcement that C. J. Milligan, who for the past three years has been the manager of that paper, has resigned his position owing to a difference of opinion regarding the policy of the paper. This, too, is the cause of the recent bewilderment of its readers.

Mr. Blair and his personal friends own practically the whole stock of the paper. Mr. Blair has personally directed its policy and inspired most of its editorials. When he resigned, by force of the voting power of his stock, he drew the Telegraph with him strongly against the will of Mr. Milligan and others interested in the paper. Negotiations followed, but with little result, until, after the house had voted the railway bill through, Mr. Milligan, without consulting Mr. Blair, took the responsibility of declaring the policy of the Telegraph. Mr. Blair's influence has since prevented a repetition of anything like that, and yesterday at a stormy meeting of the directors, was sufficient to force Mr. Milligan to resign and to draw the paper again with him into opposition to the government. What will be the result the future will show. No mortal man dare prophesy concerning the mysterious Telegraph.

While those who, for the good of the country, are opposing this Grand Trunk Pacific deal, will welcome the support of the Telegraph in their righteous work, it is greatly to be regretted that the constant course of that journal has been such as to make its influence upon public opinion practically nil.

TARTE KNOWS.

Whatever else may be said of Mr. Tarte, he cannot be accused of fear. What he has to say, he says, no matter where he is and without much consideration of the consequences. He spoke at a liberal meeting in La Prairie, Quebec, the other day before 5,000 people summoned together by Messrs. Monet and Bourassa, M. P.s, to hear a discussion between them and Mr. Tarte. His speech there was substantially the same as the one he made at the conservative meeting a few weeks before.

Before his turn came he listened to a good deal of abuse from Mr. Monet, who among other things accused him of dishonest conduct in retaining his paper, La Patrie, presented to him by the liberals, as a weapon to fight that party with. Not contented with denying the charge, Mr. Tarte threw out a little challenge of his own.

"Let my friends in the liberal party allow me to give them a bit of friendly advice," he said. "Family quarrels generally turned out badly. I thank my friends for this opportunity of making my explanations, but why, when there is no reason for it, provoke a quarrel which may have disagreeable results later. We have no interest in causing any scandal in public life in this province; we have had enough of that. Why try to make dirty linen when everything is clean?"

"Ah, my friends, do you want an enquiry? Do you want a second one? I am making no threats, but I will warn you at once that I will not become a 'one-man band' for anybody."

"A newspaper! Why I am not the only minister or former minister who has a newspaper. Let us not speak here of subscriptions, I beg of you. I know how political parties are run. I know it well, and it is because I do know it that I am in a position to say why I retired from the cabinet."

It is interesting to note that no further nasty things were said about

Mr. Tarte. It is to be hoped that the liberal press will keep up its complimentary talk long enough to get that little Frenchman good and mad. He could tell some very entertaining stories if he once got started.

The liberals have been very generous of late in handing Mr. Tarte over body and baggage to the conservatives because he happened to disagree with the government. But that gentleman himself should be allowed to have a word to say about what side of politics he is on. Here is his declaration made in a recent speech in answer to a taunt about his change—

"I have entered the ranks of the crowd, the fine crowd that I see here before me. I was invited to speak here; it is a liberal meeting. I am happy to discuss matters with you. If the conservatives invite me tomorrow to go and speak before their friends I will accept with pleasure. The question of protection is one that dominates both parties."

It is to be hoped that the crown will be represented at the David Weston Inquest and that no pains will be spared, nor any favor shown in fixing the blame for that disaster where it belongs. If the river steamers have been falling into ways perilous to their passengers three lives are enough to be sacrificed on the altar of their convenience.

The statement that the government is again talking about the fast Atlantic service is another sign of an early election.

With the Chapman Festival Chorus, the McClearys, the Goldstream Band and the autumn Carnival and Horse Show St. John people should not find their spare time hanging heavily for the next couple of weeks.

Cardinal Sarto was a much happier man than Pope Pius X.

SUCCESS.

It's little the difference where you arrive. The serious question is how you arrive.

Are you up to your eyes in a wild romance? Does your lady lead you a dallying dance? Do you question if love be fate, or chance? O, the world will ask "Did he get the girl?" Though gentlemen, coxcomb, clown or churl, Master, or mortal of passion's whirl! But let it be that. The world will run, Though you never bequest it daughter or son.

But what, O, lover will come to you, If you be not chivalrous, honest, true? As far ahead as a man may think. You can see your little soul shrivel and sink.

It's not do you want? It's what have you been?

Are you grumped for the world-old, world-wide race? For the metal which shines like the sun's own face? Till it dazzles us blind to the mean and base? Do you say to yourself "When I have my head, I will give of the plenty which I have stored, And do you forget as you give your gift, What the gift you are giving yourself? Though your mountain of gold may dazzle the day, Can you climb its height with your feet of clay?"

O, it's the stamp on the metal you win; It's the stamp on the metal you win within. It's not what you give! It's what you live!

Are you going to call to the polar seas To the point of misery and not degrees? Where the very words in your larynx freeze? Well, the mob may ask "Did he reach the pole?" Though fair, or foul, did he touch the goal? But if that be the spirit which stirs your soul, Off, off from the land below the seas! For you are not of the stuff of heroes. Hot many an an old lead man forth To the farthest end of the Farthest North, But can you be faithful to war or sea? In a land where nothing but hell is real? O, it isn't "How far?" But "How fast?"

And it isn't your look-out where you arrive, But it's up to you as to how you arrive. —Edmund Vance Cooke

THE JOSSELYN INQUEST.

Coroner Berryman will, with the jury already named in the Sun, hold an inquiry Friday evening in the Berryman hall into the circumstances connected with the injuries received by young Josselyn on the Westmorland road last Saturday night as the result of which the youngster died Sunday.

The police visited Willow Grove yesterday and invited some seven or eight people to attend at this enquiry to tell what they know about the fatal occurrence.

Deputy Chief Jenkins and Detective Killen arrested Joseph Thompson, a 23 year old colored man who lives out there, on suspicion of running into with a double team, an express wagon driven by Miss Josselyn on the night of the 19th instant on the Westmorland road, in the city of St. John, throwing Josselyn out of said wagon, causing injuries from which death ensued on the 20th instant.

This means a charge of manslaughter.

Thompson is a colored man and he had two or three colored friends with him when the collision happened. They are all known to the authorities.

FIRE AT MILLTOWN.

ST. STEPHEN, Sept. 23.—A serious conflagration was averted this afternoon at Milltown, Me., by the prompt arrival of the four fire departments on the river. It is supposed that a spark from a W. C. railroad engine set fire to shavings and other debris on the bog where wood is piled.

A high wind was blowing and soon four wooden dwellings were on fire. These were quite badly damaged, but the fire ladders soon had the blaze under control.

The sight of a dead horse being carried in an open sledge along City Road yesterday evening about six o'clock was particularly disgusting. The horse was lying on his back, with all four legs straight up in the air and no covering of any kind over the carcass.

FREDERICTON RACES.

FREDERICTON, N. B., Sept. 23.—The second day's exhibition races drew a large crowd, estimated at nearly 2,000. Interest centred largely in the free-for-all trot and pace, and at times enthusiasm was at fever heat.

As was anticipated, the favorite Ituna, won the race in straight heats, being never headed in either heat. The splendid form of the horse aroused the admiration of all and both horse and rider were given a great ovation.

There were five starters out of ten entries, but Park B., who acted badly, was withdrawn in the first heat. This heat was a struggle from start to finish between Ituna and Nominee Prince, but the gamey border horse was never headed, though hard pressed, and won by half a length. In the second heat Ituna won easily by half a dozen lengths, but Gertie Glen made a great fight for second place, with Nominee Prince leading him up the stretch until almost under the wire, when he shot ahead.

In the last heat Gully, who had been acting badly, made a gallant effort to wrest first place from the border horse and finished second in what was by all odds the prettiest race of the meet. When it was announced that the time was 2:17 3/4, lowering the track record by three seconds, the crowd went mad. Summary:

FREE-FOR-ALL
Ituna, J. M. Johnson, Calais.....1 1

The 1 1/2 class was won by a local horse, MacDuff, in straight heats, he never being headed throughout the race. This horse never started until this season and his friends predict great things for him. Summary:
