The candle was one of these made in Sicily. I recollected that detail by remembering the brilliant collection of candles, which contained specimens from every part of the world. In thinking who could have used a Sicilian candle I concluded that he must have arrived from Sicily. The microscope also showed two small reddish hairs in the candle grease, moustache hairs, undoubtedly as those of the beard are quite different. The murderer after the crime had probably twisted or bitten his moustache without being aware of what he was doing.

The doctor's reasoning was confirmed by the immediate arrest of one, Pforzinger, a passenger on the Donna Maria. The doctor handed him a piece of paper which he took in his left hand, which was wounded. The candle end was found in his pocket and he confessed to the crime.

Up to Him.

GOVERNMENT FAVORS A CANADIAN LLOYDS

Montreal, Sept. 12.—That the Dominion government is in favor of the establishment of a Canadian Lloyd's and would willingly lend aid to the consummation of such a proposal, is the declaration of officials of the harbor commission, who have interviewed Hon. J. D. Hazen, minister of marine and fisheries, on the subject.

The failure of the British marine underwriters to recognize what has been done for the St. Lawrence route during the last ten years by refusing to reduce their Canadian marine insurance rates, has stirred local shipping men, and harbor officials believe that with the declaration of Hon. Mr. Hazen, a solution of one of the most difficult problems of the St. Lawrence will be near at hand.

The consensus of opinion with regard to the actual organization of a Canadian Lloyd's is that the federal government, in consideration of a substantial subsidy, should own a controlling interest in the proportion of 51 to 49. The establishment of a Canadian Lloyd's backed by the government, it is estimated by marine authorities, would have the effect of reducing existing marine insurance rates on the St. Lawrence by from one-half to two-thirds.
