

start on his return trip, we called in a doctor to examine him. We would not permit him to travel, and on next year's eve, after a severe nose bleed, we took him to the hospital, where he has been ever since, trying to get a very slight touch of pneumonia under control. We hope to be able to go home again within the next day or two. His many years of service in Africa have really undermined his health.

Baby Colin seems to be growing and developing every day. At seven and a half weeks he is now over ten pounds, and has put more than two inches on to his stature. He seems to grow more and more like Jan, and while he still was that it was slightly incorrectly addressed, and was laid aside in the Christmas rush of mail. Her address is Ray Toronto, which is a suburb just west of the city. However, your letter of the 26th of December reached us with no delay at all, even though it was peculiarly directed. I have wondered, from the wording of that letter, whether you had written to us between your birthday and Christmas. If you did, we have not yet received the letter.

We have had a very busy time since Christmas. When Henry's father arrived for the holiday he had rather a bad cough, which did not seem to improve, and before letting him
