A Mother's Rebuke, BY ELEANOR C. DONNELLY,

Before a statue in a shrine of green, A parian image of the Heavenly Queen, The holy Rodriguez in rapture kneels, And to his gracious Mistress thus appeals: "O fair Madonna! sweetest Mother mine, My heart, my soul, my being, all are thine; "Tis true, blest Maid, great love thou bearest But greater, stronger is my love for thee !"

Then Mary, wounded in her tender love, Speaks from the marble image placed above (In grieving accents speaks the sin ess one); "What sayest thou, what sayest thou, my wouldst measure love? My dear Alphonsus, The distance 'twixt you sky and earth Is not so great as that which angels see Betwixt thy little love, and MINE for the

HUMOROUS.

"A prudent man," says a witty Frenchman, "is like a pig. His head prevents him from going too far."

Her mother said the little creature lived on love, but one month after marriage, when the grocery bill came in, he saw that he had made the greatest oversight of his life by not ascertaining what that particular love was for.

"You had better change that rug," said a lady to her servant. "Don't you think it corroborates better with the carpet in this way?" was the response. It was the same girl who told her mistress that a gentleman with a predicament in his seech had called to see her.

"I don't like a cottage built man," said young Sweeps to his rich old uncle, who was telling the story of his early trials for the hundredth time. "What do you mean by a cottage built man?" asked his uncle. "A man with only one story," answered young Sweeps. That settles it. Young Sweeps was left out of his uncle's will.

An apothecary, not a little distinguished An apothecary, not a little distinguished for his impudence, with the hope of disconcerting a oung clergyman, whom he knew to be a man of singular modesty, asked him in the hearing of a large company, "Why the patriarchs of old lived to such an extreme age?" to which the clergyman replied: "I suppose the ancient patriarchs took no physic."

How to Parse "Courting."

In a lesson in parsing the sentence, "Mar courting in capacity of bliss," etc., the word "courting" came to a pretty young miss of fourteen to parse. She commenced hesitatingly, but got along well enough until she was to tell what it agreed with. Here she stopped short; but as the teacher said "Very well, what does courting agree with?" Ellen blushed and held down her head.
"Ellen, don't you know what that agrees

"Ellen, don't you know what that agrees with !" "Ye-ve-yes, sir."

"Well, Ellen, why don't you parse that word? What does it agree with?"
(Blushing still more and stammering), Ellen said: "It agrees with all the girls,

Bridget's Soliloquy. N. Y. Ledger.

Well, it's queer, it is, and I've been thinking about it that hard that I've a head ache! This morning, at five, I was up, for I'd been told by missus it was cleanin; d y; and I got my breakfast ready, and my house clothes all washed out, and pleasty of hot water in the boiler, and not be seen and the second of the second and put on my old linsey petticoat that my grandmother gave me, and my big shoes, and a handkerchief over my head, and was at the upper windows when the master ran up the road to catch the train, And I'd been working three hours when missus got up and came down to the table in her blue cashmere morning-gown, with the silk flowers on it, and bid me make breakfast tay for her, for she couldn't take coffee on account of a headache. And it was ten by the clock when she rose from the table and came into the parlor where I was cleaning the inside shutters, said 1, "Yes, ma'am." Och! but it was a hard d y, and me moiling and toiling, rubbing here and scrubbing there, and scraping this and scouring that, and running to answer the bell, and getting and rigs, and bath star carpets with a club; and before the angels, nothing did my mistress do but sit about on sofas advisin' me ginerally all wrong, and fanning herself, or reading a book. Sure, she'd the right! She pays the wages and I get them. No need for her to touch a band to anything and for her it for the start of the s hand to anything; and far be it from me to criticise my employers; but I'm comin' to something else. When I'd the dinner ready and the master was come, I was out in the garden under the dining-room window scouring the new brass fire grate they've got of late, and I heard them talking. "And how do you feel the day, my "And how do you feel the day, my dear?" said the master.

"Och," said she, "I'm that weary and atigued I can't hold my head up. I've been house cleaning all day."
"My dear," said he, "you shouldn't do so much. You shouldn't, raly," said

"I want things to be nate, my dear,"

she said.

"There's Biddy," said he.

"You can't trust anything to servants;
they're that idle."

"Thrue enough, my dear. Now lie down on the sofa and rest you." And sure, when I went in to clear away there she was, with an afghan over her feet, and a pillow under her head, and him a fanning her, and holding cologne to her nose.

"And Biddy," said he "go down to the cellar and bring up a bottle of that wine in the basket, for your mistress is overfatigued, I fear, with house cleaning."

And I was that dumb with surprise I couldn't answer. And I've been thinking were since how queer it is, and how aisy HARKNESS & CO., Druggists,
