The Municipal Councillors are not concomstant of, a civil judgment in the same case. Let us examine this assertion, and see what may be arged against it: We acknowledge that the French Court always tried the case criminally indicatives. It is notorious that numbers of judgment, awarded the criminal punishment and the civil remedy. But why so f—it was not bethe civil remedy. But why so ?-it was not be- are, by complete subserviency to the Ministers' cause a criminal proceeding was necessarily intro- views. In short, the civil expressed in the Resolutions of the York County proceeding was, for reasons then, but not now ex- Council. May we not, therefore, reasonably re-

The proceeding was, for reasona then, but not nov ex-intent, associated with the criminal proceeding.... it was for those reasons, not siparated, but it was it was for those reasons, not siparated, but it was three reasons, in its nature, inseparable. Of those three reasons, the first militates against the addi-teress, and therefore cannot be invoked in her fa-vor; the second is effete, as there is no criminal proceeding for adultry....' cossnite ratione, cessal et ipsa lez ;" and the third, being in favor of the injured Plaintif, cannot be opposed to him; " Ler is alterize favoren introducta, son potest contro eum retorguert." Lastly, it may be observed that the criminal proceeding, even if indispensa-bly preliminary to, and connected with; the civil in our French law, is now, by the silence of our eriminal law, become impossible, and therefore by preliminary to, and connected with, the evil in our Franch law, is now, by the silence of our criminal law, become impossible, and therefore cannot be required as such preliminary; "impo-tentions naw of the Hon, Mr. Justice Charles Mondelst, it might be plausibly averred that our Lower Canadian law is, in this particular, the same as that aneisently existing in France, " minus the criminal proceeding." I will be seen that we have reverently ab-tained from noticing the arguments used by the fationed from noticing the arguments used by the fationed from noticing the arguments used by the movere, thought right to make the foregoing of the movere, thought right to make the foregoing of the merention, in order to press upon our Legislature the merenizy of its spooly interposition—the more necessary as the plausibility of the reasons adducible in flow of the Plaintiff ' rejected con-chaines, might lead imary persone into the arror of supposing that they were well founded in law;
