Was Personally Attended by Dr. A. W. Chase Before He Became Famous as the Author of Dr. Chase's Receipt Book.

Here is a letter from an aged gentleman who consulted Dr. Chase, long before his Receipt Book attained a circulation of a world-wide fame. His family medicine became known to the ends of the earth. Like most people of advanced years his kidneys were breaking down and when doctors failed to help him he met Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nervine Food. I am 74 years old, superannuated work on my farm, and my kidneys are failing. I have been suffering from this ailment for many years. I have tried many remedies, but none have done me any good. I have read of your Receipt Book and have bought a box. I have taken it and I feel like a new man. My kidneys are well, my appetite is good, and I can sleep at night. I feel like a new man. I have written you to let you know that your medicine has done for me what no other medicine could. I am a great debtor to you. I have written you to let you know that your medicine has done for me what no other medicine could. I am a great debtor to you. I have written you to let you know that your medicine has done for me what no other medicine could. I am a great debtor to you.

Joy and Duty.

HENRY VAN DYKE. Joy is a duty - so with golden lore The Hebrew rabbi taught in days of yore, And happy hearts heard in their speech Almost the highest wisdom man can reach. But one bright peak still rises far above, And there the Master stands whose name is Love. Saying to those whom duty tasks employ: 'Life is divine when duty is a joy.'

Sir Ian Hamilton.

Perhaps the most thrilling episode in the war is the forcing the Dardanelles, and probably no more picturesque, daring or more gallant commander could be found for this expedition than Sir Ian Hamilton.

About his cluster of wonderful stories of still more wonderful achievements in Burma, in Egypt, in India. Belonging to a very old and aristocratic military family, he is by tradition and by training a soldier of brilliant literary attainments, a lover of pictures, and a student of archaeology.

Not the trained tactician of to-day, nor the strategist of the military school, but the fighter who fits for the love of the encounter. His ideal is the ideal one finds in the heroes of Homer; a thing of hand-to-hand encounters, of daring personal risks and hairbreadth escapes. His adventures would compare favorably with those of the heroes of the old poet - in the Barren hills he lay wounded by the Nile, he was found on the head of his umbrella and demanding of those who came to his rescue: 'Who owns this beard? I want to make a complaint.' This is probably one of those little legends that, as Barry reminded Lenore, grew up about the personality of the great and the good.

As a matter of fact, Sir Ian hunted crocodiles on the Nile but whether with an umbrella is not stated. It is an assured fact that he went into Afghanistan at a time when the presence of a white man there was a prodigious event. Of that expedition there is also a story of an American's orders to have him caught, sent to the capital in an iron cage, which returned to the Ameer with the emerald smile on the face of the tiger, outside, and personally conducting the expedition much to the delight of the august sovereign of this ancient empire.

He is a hero of Lydians, where he commanded a mobile column against the Boers. Everywhere, in addition to the cut and dried reports of his expeditions, his adventurous spirit has given rise to marvellous stories of his powers, until in India, Egypt, Burma and Afghanistan, the Orientals have come to believe that he will live forever. One story is that his blood is molten gold; another, current among the Sikhs is that he never sleeps. He is reported to have been wounded four or five times. The relief of Chitral is regarded as the supreme glory of all his achievements. Withal, he is popular with civilians, with politicians and with apparently everyone but the Germans, who cannot understand his independent methods of warfare, and with the Turks, who regard him with contempt because he is a slender man, lacking the big stomach of all really great commanders like Napoleon possess. The fact that he is a friend of Lord Kitchener and Lord Curzon appeals to London where Sir Ian is an idol. The London Mail regards Hamilton as a paradox because he loves fighting for his own sake, and at it can quarrel with nobody. It is said that he had decided that he would retire to a rural English home and take to fox-hunting, when he was called again to active service for his country. It is a hard and strenuous position for any man, but for any man who has passed his sixtieth year it is doubly so. But the Dardanelles campaign is one that appeals to Sir Ian. It follows no plan in the ordinary sense. It is one not fought, involving rushes from the trenches, and personal encounters at the point of the bayonet. Sir Ian is in his element, and is, it is said, always in the thick of the scourgings. Not only his men, over whom he possesses the gift of personal command in the highest degree, but his brother officers love him. Meeting every situation with the tact of a diplomat, a tact which is the outcome of a wholesome normal, unselfish personality, he captivates and charms. His long experience with the Orient gives him an advantage in dealing with many situations which his confreres are quick to recognize and acknowledge. His dignity, his courtesy and his resourcefulness are alike wonderful. The man for the work is the unanimous decision of the military authorities, who are watching, as is the whole world, with breathless eagerness the magnificent attack upon this great natural fortress blocking the way to Constantinople, upon whose success depends such vast issues, and whose achievement will be the most wonderful accomplishment in the wonderful career of General Sir Ian Hamilton.

Too Much Bed Clothes.

Almost everyone sleeps under bed clothing that is too heavy. The patchwork quilt, with its weight of stuffed materials and wadding, is an abomination. People forget that bed clothes are intended to keep the heat in, not to keep the cold out.

Torturing Sciatica.

A SEVERE SUFFERER CURED THROUGH THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS. Fierce, darting pains - pains like red hot needles being driven through the flesh - in the thigh; perhaps down the legs to the ankles - that's sciatica. None but the victim can realize the torture. But the sufferer need not now be discouraged for there is a cure in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new, rich red blood, which soothes and strengthens the feeble nerves, and thus frees them from pain and restores the sufferer to cheerful activity. In proof we give the statement of Mr. Thos. D. Leinster, Wapella, Sask., who says: 'I was attacked with sciatica which gradually grew worse until I was confined to my bed; for three months I had to be shifted and turned in my bed as I was unable to help myself. I suffered the greatest torture from the fierce, stabbing pains that accompanied every movement. I consulted several doctors and took drugs and medicines until I was nauseated, but without getting any benefit, and I began to believe I would be a continuous sufferer. Finally I was prevailed upon to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking them for about six weeks I was able to get out of bed. From that on I kept steadily improving until I was free from this terrible and painful malady.'

The Ruined Cathedral at Rheims.

Radyard Kilping has lately been on the continent and among other things has written a most touching description of the ruined Cathedral at Rheims.

But there is no hieroglyphic for Rheims, no blunting of the mind at the abomination committed on the sacred tower. The thing that is left, maimed and blinded from out of the utter wreckage of the archbishop's palace on the one side and a dust heap of tumbled houses on the other. They shelled, as they still shell it, with high explosives and with incendiary bombs, so that the statues and stonework still in their places are burned the color of raw flesh. The gargoyles are smashed, statues, crochets and spires tumbled, walls split and torn, windows thrust out and all the tracery obliterated. Wherever one looks at the tortured pile there is mutilation and defilement and yet it had never more of a soul than it has today.

Inside - Cover yourselves, gentlemen, said the architect, 'this place is no longer consecrated' - everything is swept clear or burned out from end to end, except two candle sticks in front of the niches where Joan of Arc's image used to stand. There is a French flag there now. The last time I saw Rheims Cathedral, it was in a Spring twilight when the great window glowed and the only lights within were those of some candles which a peasant Englishman had lit in Joan of Arc's honor on those same candle sticks. The high altar was covered with velvet carpets, the pavement and tiles were cracked and jarred out of the rubbish that had fallen from above, the floor was gritty with dust of glass and powdered stone. The great doors had been blown inward by the blast of a shell in the archbishop's garden until they had been bent grotesquely to the curve of a caulk. There they had jammed the windows. But the record has been made and will be kept by better hands than mine. It will last through generations in which the feintest is cut off from fellowship with mankind, and through all the long, still years when the war of the body is at an end and the real war begins. Rheims is but one of the altars which the heathens have made on which to consecrate their own faith throughout the world.

REPAIRS - Protect all woodwork above and around boilers, if within three feet with metal shield, also all woodwork near furnaces. It is best to rivet the length of pipe together to prevent disjoining. The pipe should fit perfectly into the chimney. Examine the pipe frequently for rust holes or other defects. Keep them free from dust, dirt and spider webs, which are easily ignited. DEFECTS - Defective stoves, boilers, furnaces, pipes and chimneys should be promptly repaired or replaced. OVERHEATING - Beware of overheating stoves, boilers, furnaces and pipes. ASHES - These should never be placed in wooden receptacles, or bins, on wooden floors, or against wood partitions, walls, fences, buildings, or any other work. Use metal receptacles only, and dump ashes away from all buildings.

CAUTION - These matters are technical, but very simple and merely call for ordinary care. You cannot afford to be careless when the lives of your loved ones and the property of yours if any your neighbor is at stake. Let 'Care and Caution' be the watchword and in this way assist in reducing Canada's enormous fire loss.

REWARD. A reward of $10.00 is offered by the Town of Wolfville for information that will lead to the conviction of any person or persons committing any of the following offences: Theft, breaking into houses, buildings, trespassing, destroying, or causing damage to property, the use of profane or abusive language on the street, or in public buildings, the illegal selling of intoxicants, incendiarism, or any criminal offences.

How the Dangers of Fire May Be Minimized.

The season is fast approaching when cool evenings will demand the starting of fires in our homes. September and October have become known to firemen as the months when chimneys are most liable to the most trouble.

STOVES - Place a metal stove board on the wood floor under the stove, and extending at least twelve inches in front of the ash pit door. Protect all wall and partitions within two feet of any stove with a metal shield, leaving an air space between the shield and the wall. Leave no kindling or other wood in the oven over night. Do not hang clothes too near the stove or stovepipes. PIPES - See that the lengths of stovepipe are well fitted together, together, free from rust holes and parted seams, wired firmly and fitted properly into the chimney. Stovepipes passing through partitions, walls or floors, attics and roofs are dangerous at best. Where these must pass through partitions, walls or roofs use a large, ventilated double flue pipe. You should examine the stovepipes in the attic. They may come apart or rust. Fluff and spider webs are likely to gather on and around them, to be set free when you least expect it. CHIMNEYS - Chimneys should be built from the ground up, and never rest on wood supports. The setting of the woodwork will cause cracks in the chimney. Nor should the chimney walls be used to support joists or other woodwork. Softwood and pine make an often responsible for defects in the chimney. Use good quality brick and cement mortar. Chimney walls should be at least eight inches thick, the flues of ample size and lined with fire clay or terra cotta. Never cover up the flue holes with rags or paper nor stuff them with anything but a metal sheet. Chimneys should be cleaned frequently.

Stop Yer Kickin'!

Stop yer kickin' 'bout the times; Get a hustle on you; Skirmish 'round and grab the dime; Ef the dollars shun you, Croakin' never bought a dress, Growlin' isn't in it; Fix your peepers on success, Then go in to win it. Times is gettin' good again - Try to help them all you kin.

Don't get 'round with hangin' lip; That is sure to floor you; Try to get a better grip; On the work before you, Put some ginger in your works; When you greet a neighbor, Throw your trouble to the birds; Get right down to labor. An' you'll notice every day 'Things' comin' right your way.

Stop yer kickin', got a hold; Of the wheel and turn it; You can never handle gold 'Less yer try to earn it. Brush the cobwebs from yer eyes, An' you'll notice that yer skies 'Alius'll be shinin'. If you hain't the nerve to try, Sneak away somewhere and die.

A clergyman taught an odd man in his parish to read and found him an apt pupil. Calling at the cottage some time after he found only the wife at home. 'How's John?' asked he. 'He is well, thank you,' said his wife. 'How does he get on with his reading?' 'Nicely, sir.' 'Ah! I suppose he can read his Bible comfortably now?' 'Bible, sir! He was out of the Bible and into the sporting papers long ago.'

'To what do you attribute your remarkable health?' 'Well,' replied the very old gentleman, 'I reckon I got a good start on most people by bein' born before germs were discovered, thereby havin' less to worry about.'

The CAT was happy in the time at which he assumed command. The German rush in the east manifested near an end, and the Little Father will get the credit - even if unearned - of stopping it. - Toronto Globe.

Mrs. Wallaby - De agent says if we ain't got de rent nex' Monday we've got to get out. Sam. Wallaby - Nex' Monday? Den we loan need ter worry fo' de nex' fo' days!

Commander - What's his character apart from his leave breaking? Petty Officer - Well, sir, this man 'e goes ashore when 'e fikes, 'e comes off when 'e likes; 'e uses 'orrible language when 'e's spoken to - in fact, from 'is general be'avior, 'e might be an officer!

Eastern Shirts

Stop Yer Kickin'! Why Are We Fighting. There come, in the life of every individual, times when he or she must thrust feeling aside, to suffer and endure. Nations have similar experiences, and such a time has come to Canada. Her people in the mass must suffer and endure, and consent with firmness and fortitude to whatever sacrifice may be necessary in this great crisis in their history.

One is sometimes led to wonder if patriotism means as much to the people today as it meant to former generations. That Canada is in real danger of being bent under a foreign yoke admits of no doubt at all; nor can any man or woman, with even a superficial knowledge of conditions in the world today, question the assertion that if British ideals were supplanted by German ideals of government this country would no longer offer a happy home to a free people.

And yet it is necessary to put forth the reasons why we should fight, and privileges they and those dear to them now enjoy, but are in danger of losing forever. If these young men led in Germany they would not be asked to enlist, but early on they would be taken to the ranks. Singular evidence would prevail in Canada if Germany should triumph in this war. It is worth anything to retain freedom of action, and that freedom can only be preserved for coming generations of Canadians by the courage and devotion of the young men of this generation - why do they hesitate to join the colors - and why should any attempt to dissuade them from answering the call of duty in the hour of their country's peril?

Directly opposite ideals are at war. Civilization is arrayed against a trained and powerful barbarism. Germany seeks world dominion for principles which are alien to every British subject, cruel and free to a degree that justice and mercy are more to be desired than the crushing burden of militarism and the rule of a bureaucracy whose weapon is brute force. He who strikes a blow against Germany strikes for the emancipation of the world from a slavery that threatens not the British Empire alone but all humanity.
