

Parting Words.
Forth from the peaceful ark of "Home," Forth, o'er the waters wild,
And through a deeper gloom than night,

The bird must leave the parent nest, However sad it be;
And now the dreaded hour is come That we must part with thee.

And thou has plumed thy wing for flight, Thy heart with hope, but thine eyes Alas! that earth should look so fair To an unpractised eye.

That thou must drink at Marah's wells, Their bitterness to taste, And prove thyself this world to be A dreary desert waste.

That thou must tread with weary foot "The wilderness of sin," (Exod. xvi. 7)
To learn how true it is thou hast An evil heart within.

O, look to Jesus! gaze on Him—All loveliness is there—This, this alone, can save thy soul From every deadly snare.

O, hide his word within thy heart,
And search it, day by day, Thy one desire, thy firm resolve,
To hear and to obey.

Farewell! my child, our "God is love," In Him our only refuge lies;
His presence on thy pathway shine,
His blessing rest on thee.

Jeannie Sinclair, OR,
THE "LILY OF THE STRATH."

"Liket, sir; hoo can he liket? He's a hard and unjust man. He screws everyting out o' them that he can. The rents are raised sae that the farmer can hardly mak' a livin'. It was sae different, sir, in the time o' the Mowbrays, for they were kind ta' the poor, and ta' that can't aboot them. They ha'e been sair missed, and will be mair sae, for I'm tell't that Maister M'Quirk is gettin' mair tyrannical every day."

"The proprietor can't know the character of his factor?" observed the youth, whose face had flushed in a singular manner.

"Maybe no," rejoined Ned. "Maister Mowbray himsel' deid a year or twa syne, and it's na ta' be expected that the young laird will tak' ony interest in the place; for ye may say he never saw it. He was just three years old when the family left. They say he has been travellin' abroad for some time."

"He should, at all events, see that his property is righteously managed, said the youth in a stern and severe tone.

"You're the Castle linn' just below us," said Ned, pointing to a grey turret which rose above the trees, almost opposite and under where they lay.

"Ah, indeed! A very fine old building it seems! You call it the Castle?"

"Baigley Castle, sir. It belongs ta' Sir Fergus Sinclair. Pair man, he has had his trials and troubles ta'. A maist mysterious affair happened at the Castle some years syne. The Baronet's infant heir was stolen awa'."

"Stolen!" echoed Denman.

"Ay, stolen, sir. At ony sa' b'ody believes that! At ony sa' mornin' his little crib was empty, the window o' the room was open, and there were marks o' feet on the ivy outside. Frae that day till this the bairn has neither been seen nor heard tell o'."

"Most extraordinary!" exclaimed the youth.

"Was no suspicion entertained as to the author or authors of the abduction? Had no one a motive for the crime?"

"There was ane had a motive," replied Ned, and a very strong ane ta'. Only ye see we maun speak lauch on the matter, for there was nae proof that he had a hand in it ony mair than another. The man I mean is the laird's cousin—Maister Lynedoch."

"I see," said Denman. "Failing issue of the Baronet he is the heir to title and estate?"

"Exactly," responded Ned, with a nod.
"Ye tower that ye see stan' amang the hills, ta' the west, is his little place. That and twa or three score acres o' moorland is a' he has—hardly enouch ta' keep b'ody and soul together. If the Baronet had a peccollarly emphatic tone, and strode down the hill without uttering another word.

"The youth, amused at the excited and resolution way in which his strange companion prohibited the Baronet's name, followed close behind him, and soon they came to a well-beaten road, which led by a stone bridge across the river.

"Scarcely had they got to the other side, when a loud scream attracted the attention of both, and looking in the direction from whence it came, they were horrified to see a young girl, in a park by the river side, flying from a mad bull, which was pursuing her with tremendous bellows of rage.

"Lord! ha'e mercy!" exclaimed Ned.
"Is't Jeannie—Jeannie Sinclair—the Lily o' the Strath?"

"Good heavens! if that caraged brute overtakes her she will be gored to death," cried the youth, and, at a bound he was over the fence, and rushing forward to the girl's rescue.

"She saw him, and instinctively fled forward to meet him. The animal was gaining on her every moment, and it was obvious she could not escape by flight.

"The youth flew forward, and, as he passed her, he directed her to keep running, while he gallantly went between her and the furious animal.

"Taking of his coat, he brandished it in the bull's face, which had the effect of drawing the animal's attention towards himself, and he had the nervous satisfaction of seeing it turn from pursuing the girl and turn towards him. He had now to think of his own safety, and ran across the park towards the river.

"The animal was, however, close upon him, and before he gained the bank, he heard its horrible breathing and tremendous roars close in his rear.

"Glancing round, he saw it bounding towards him with head down, and eye-burning like glaring coals. In a kind of despair he turned and faced it, but having no weapon with which to defend himself, his chance was a poor one, and a sickly scream came to his ears as he beheld his helpless position.

"In an instant the bull was upon him, and tossed him high into the air. He fell heavily on the ground, stunned and senseless, in the tanks of the river.

FACTORY FOR SALE OR LEASE.

THE WATCH FACTORY AT WAL-THAM, MASS.

Every sixth minute in the working day a finished watch movement is the average production of the above Factory. Yet, at this enormous rate of manufacture, the Company can but barely supply the demand. They have already produced almost

HALF A MILLION OF WATCHES, most of which are now in the pockets of the people, testifying to their superior merits as timekeepers. They are now almost exclusively used on

ALL THE LEADING RAILWAYS.

Where they are found to run with perfect accuracy, in spite of the constant jar, which so much affects ordinary watches.

SHIP CAPTAINS

and other officers, who are frequently absent on long voyages, prefer THE AMERICAN WATCH to any other, as they are not perceptibly affected by change of climate, and do not require frequent regulating. The story of the twenty-five dollar "Elmer" watch that was carried five years by a soldier in the Army of the Potomac, and that varied one minute and a half in that time, WITHOUT CARE OR CLEANING, could hardly be told of any other watch of the price that ever was made.

TO LUMBERMEN

these watches are of great value, not being liable to stop or get out of repair during their months of absence in the woods. They are admirably ADAPTED FOR PRESENTATION, as the movements are not only reliable, but the cases in gold are rich and handsome and of guaranteed fineness. Thousands of these watches are now worn in Canada—every day they are becoming more popular. Very anxious to avoid being the only watches sold in any quantity in the Dominion.

Buyers should always require the guarantee of the Company with each watch, to avoid being imposed upon by spurious Swiss imitations. These watches may be ordered through any Jeweller in the Dominion, or sent direct to the Company, by post, or in districts where there are no watch-makers, we supply them to general merchants, or in districts where there are the cheapest watches in the world!
