

No social affair is complete without the delicious-tasting

Blue Ribbon Ceylon Tea

The fragrance and rich creamy taste of this tea are peculiar to it alone.

Forty Cents
Black Mixed Should be Fifty Ask for Ceylon Green the Red Label

THE P. E. I. CASE

Judgment of Court in Representation Dispute.

Ottawa, June 9.—In the Supreme Court, yesterday morning judgment was rendered in the case submitted as the representation of Prince Edward Island. The court decided in the affirmative, leaving the representation subject to variation upon each decennial census.

SEALING SHIP MISSING

Is Thought to Be Lost With All Hands.

St. John's, Nfld., June 9.—The steamer Honou, which was sent to search for the sealing schooner Dominion, lost amid the ice floes with a crew of twenty-eight men, reports having seen no sign of the missing ship or crew. It is thought possible that they are among the floes in Belle Isle Strait, where the steamer cannot reach them; otherwise the crew must have perished. The bodies of two French fishermen drifted ashore in a dory at Piccadilly Bay on Saturday, victims of the recent gale on the Grand Banks.

NO TONIC LIKE THEM

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Vernon Bromley's Rheumatism and Sciatica.

Trenton, Ont., June 8.—Vernon Bromley, formerly clerk at the Gilbert House here, but now a resident at Morrisville, N. Y., has given for publication a statement of the cure he received with general satisfaction by his numerous friends in Trenton. Mr. Bromley's statement reads: "The citizens of Trenton all know what a cripple I was from Rheumatism and Sciatica. I could not work and I could scarcely lie down, the pain was so great. I could get no relief till I was induced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Twelve boxes cured me completely. 'I am thoroughly convinced that my cure is a permanent one, and so highly do I think of Dodd's Kidney Pills that I am never without them in the house. I think there is no tonic like them.'"

Against Sunday Golf.

Toronto, Ont., June 9.—The Toronto Methodist Conference yesterday morning passed a resolution asking that Lord's Day act be amended to prohibit Sunday golf. The resolution asks that the word "noisy" before game be struck out of the section of the act referring to games, and that there be added whether in private grounds, clubs or otherwise.

HAVE YOU

Weakness of the Back?

Pains and Aches in the region of the Kidneys?

Irregularity of Bowel or Kidney Action?

Feverishness? Chilly Sensations?

Under the Eyes?

Brick-dust Deposit or Cloudiness of Urine?

Dropsy of the Ankles or Wrists?

There are the danger signals which testify that the kidneys are not doing their work of expelling urea from the blood.

Unless these organs are brought into a healthy condition, the blood will be poisoned more and more. Some form of rheumatism is likely to follow, and Diabetes or Bright's Disease of the Kidneys may result. You must act at once. Disorders of the kidneys brook no delay. To make weak kidneys strong and to cleanse out clogged kidneys.

Use Trade Mark

Bu-Ju

The Kidney Pill That Cures

It is the product of the latest scientific research and is the great kidney regulator. BU-JU is sold by all druggists; box of 50 pills, 50 cents. Do not accept substitutes for BU-JU.

The Clapin Chemical Co.

NEW YORK, N. Y., AND WINDSOR, ONT.

ATLAS LOAN COMPANY

An Order Granted for Winding Up the Institution.

Toronto, June 9.—Yesterday at Osgoode Hall, Chancellor Boyd granted an order that the Atlas Loan Company, of St. Thomas, which closed its doors in conjunction with the Ames affair, be wound up as a petitioner was Mrs. Florence MacLaughlin, who had $30,000 invested.

NO BOUQUETS, PLEASE!

It Makes Royalty Think of Dynamite Bombs.

Berlin, June 9.—A dispatch from Frankfurt says: While Emperor William was driving to the hall in which Saturday's singing competition took place, a lady admirer threw a bouquet into the imperial carriage. The bouquet struck the Emperor's helmet, and was so forcibly thrown that the Emperor, who was sitting beside Emperor William, jumped up frightened. The thoughtless enthusiast was arrested, given a severe lecture, and then sent to the Imperial Palace. The Emperor had been warned previously not to throw flowers into the imperial carriage.

POLISH JEWS' TURN

An Outbreak Reported From Polish Provinces.

Berlin, June 9.—A Jewish refugee, Abraham Gruenfeld, describes a recent anti-Semite outbreak in Bialystok, Poland, as equaling in some details the massacre at Kishinev. The mob, he says, forced an entrance to the Jews' houses, pitched out their furniture and set fire to it. One hundred and forty-five houses and 84 shops were looted. The mob, he says, forced an entrance to the Jews' houses, pitched out their furniture and set fire to it. One hundred and forty-five houses and 84 shops were looted. The mob, he says, forced an entrance to the Jews' houses, pitched out their furniture and set fire to it. One hundred and forty-five houses and 84 shops were looted.

DROWNED IN SEVERN

Two Boys Lose Their Lives Near Severn Bridge.

Severn Bridge, Ont., June 9.—Two boys drowned in the Severn river in this vicinity since Saturday. A boy named Justin, aged 12, jumped from the bank into the river, and was drowned. The other boy, whose name was not given, was also drowned. The bodies were recovered Sunday.

PALESTINE ONLY HOPE

Nordau and Zangwill Talk About Kishineff.

Pittsburg, June 9.—The consideration of the amended constitution of the American Zionists occupied nearly all of yesterday's first session. Greetings from eminent Jews of the world were given and read at the convention. From Biarritz came these words of Dr. Max Nordau: "The name of Kishineff shows that for our people there is no such thing as progress. For us history has not moved onward by one step for the last 500 years. We are still in the fearful period of the crusades, when the pious warriors of the cross trained themselves to their heroic work by the wholesale slaughter of Jews and the looting of defenseless ghettos. It shows also that Zionism is the only way to lead our miserable brethren in Russia and elsewhere out of their present hell. I would despair of Judaism and of humanity as well if the free and happy Jews of America were to turn a deaf ear to the blood-curdling tale of Kishineff."

Israel Zangwill sent the following message: "The Kishineff massacre has brought home to the blind the need of a publicly and legally safeguarded home for our unhappy race. When you come to consider where they are crowded home should be, you will find no place as practicable as Palestine, or at least, not a state, its neighborhood."

"May the strenuous town of fire and steel in which you meet, inspire you to build a great bridge over which I, a Jew, shall pass to his ancient home and his glorious future."

BILL FOR PENNY SAVINGS BANKS

Design to Cultivate Thrift in Small Matters.

STATUS OF PRINTING BUREAU

Discussion on the Bill Respecting Infectious Diseases—The Treadgold Commission.

Ottawa, June 8.—In the House of Commons today, Mr. Fielding introduced a bill respecting penny banks. Mr. Fielding explained that it is a measure for the cultivation of thrift in small matters. The idea is to encourage small savings in a class that cannot be reached by the Government savings bank, and the Government considered it would be better to make a general rule that would apply to all such institutions. Incorporation will be by letters-patent, issued by the Governor-in-Council. They are not intended to be money-making or money-lending concerns, but will be purely money-saving institutions. The amounts deposited will be turned over to the Government savings bank except that five per cent will be retained to meet withdrawals. Capital to the amount of $10,000 will be required as a guarantee, but the bank will be allowed reasonable latitude in investing this. As such banks will be benevolent organizations the Government will allow them one-half per cent more than the regular rate of interest in the Government savings bank. This is to meet expenses, and if it is found more than sufficient for the purpose, it will be reduced at another session. The limit in the amount that can be deposited is $300. Mr. Robinson: "What is a penny?" Mr. Fielding replied that the bill was merely used to denote any small savings. The bill was read a first time. A question by Mr. Brock elicited the information that the union label is put upon the Labor Gazette. Under the act, aimed at compelling all companies owning and operating railways in the Northwest to maintain fire guards on each side of the lines.

ARE YOU MISERABLE?

If You Are, It's Ten Chances to One It's Dyspepsia, and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Always Cure That.

"I suffered from Dyspepsia and Nervousness. For eighteen months I was miserable." That is the case of M. J. Bogot, of Manson, Que., as stated by himself. Perhaps yours is similar. Perhaps you have that miserable feeling that people and circumstances are all going against you. You know you are wrong, but you can't shake off the feeling. Then do what M. Monquet did. Use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. I bought three boxes of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and they helped me considerably. If so, did not get more of them and they cured me.

"I recommend Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets to all my friends and they found them good."

He recommends them to you and if you use them you too will find them good. For Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets never yet failed to cure Dyspepsia when given a fair trial.

RAIN TO THE RESCUE

Showers Bring Relief to the Ottawa District.

Ottawa, Ont., June 9.—Ottawa district was favored with light showers yesterday, and if they continue for only a day or two much of the lost ground will be regained by the crops. Last year's hay has jumped to $18 and $20 a ton, and farmers are unwilling to sell at that for fear of shortage in supply for their own necessities. The rain is also having a salutary effect in killing out the bush fires.

DETROIT HAS A STRIKE

Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders Go Out.

Detroit, June 9.—The members of the Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders have decided to order a strike in every local boiler shop, and at the same time call out the iron workers. The strike is being called in the yards of the Detroit Shipbuilding Company. About 700 men are affected by the strike. The union is the strongest of the employers refusing to recognize the union and sign an agreement to supply none but union men in the shops.

Pain in the Back

What is the cause of it? Can it be cured? Pain in the back is a common complaint. It is a complete knockout to pain in the back, for it penetrates through the tissues, takes out the soreness and pain, invigorates tired muscles, and makes you feel like a new man. Nervousness cures quickly because it is stronger, more penetrating, and more penetrating than any other remedy. Don't suffer another minute; get Nervine quick, and rub it in, for sure as you are born it will cure you. 25c.

Principal Caven Improving.

Toronto, June 9.—Principal Caven, it was reported Sunday night, had passed a very comfortable day, and showed some improvement in his general condition.

FEMALE WEAKNESSES

in Summer Time.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Tones and Strengthens Every Weak Organ and Invigorates the Whole System.

Paine's Celery Compound has been specially prepared for the relief and cure of the many ailments that afflict women, and it never fails to give a new and healthy tone to the female organs; it removes relaxed debility and unhealthy secretions; it purifies the blood, and establishes a perfect and vigorous health. Mrs. Percy S. Brown, of Provencer, Man., writes as follows: "After deriving such wonderful good from the use of Paine's Celery Compound, I consider it my duty to let suffering women know something about the only medicine in the world that can banish female troubles and give to women that health and strength that for a long time from falling of the womb, irregularities, nervousness and much for me, and my relatives thought I would become a confirmed invalid. My sister induced me at last to try Paine's Celery Compound, and I thank God it was brought to my notice. After the use of seven bottles I am a well woman and as healthy as any of my friends. Paine's Celery Compound is surely the medicine for every sick and suffering woman, and I recommend it with all my heart."

Sour Stomach—Bad Breath.

The body depends on the bowels to carry off all waste and poisonous matters from the system. It is Nature's drainage. If the bowels don't perform their functions properly and become clogged up, the system gradually absorbs this poison. It is this which causes sick headache, biliousness, sour stomach, bad breath, inactive liver, lack of energy, heartburn, etc.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt will cure you by clearing away the obstruction and thoroughly cleansing the bowels. This brings healthy action to all the organs of the body and rids the system of the cause of illness.

In this way Abbey's Effervescent Salt permanently cures. A teaspoonful in half a glass of tepid water every morning.

act, aimed at compelling all companies owning and operating railways in the Northwest to maintain fire guards on each side of the lines.

Mr. Talbot gives notice that in committee on the Grand Trunk Pacific bill he will move to amend the bill so as to make the line pass north of Lakes Abitibi, Nepigon and Winnipeg.

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"

Chamberlain's letter to a trade unionist, published in all the papers today, intensifies the interest in the discussion. The Colonial Secretary says: "It will be impossible to secure preferential treatment with the colonies without a duty on corn, as well as other articles of food, because these are the chief articles of colonial produce." The letter maintains that the shifting duty on grain, which is about repealed, is paid by the American exporter, and that if food becomes dearer, wages would show a more than equivalent increase. He notes with pleasure the increased food production capacity of the colonies, and concludes: "If protection is wrong, how can we explain the increase in exports and wages and the general prosperity during the last twenty years of the United States and Germany, far greater than Great Britain, which is only a civilized country in the world to enjoy the blessings of unrestricted free imports?"