You may preach free trade to the farmers of the prairies, but they will have none of it. And out there your case will be getting worse all the time, instead of better. Some of these days Dakota will be coming in, not as one State mersly, but a two that will be four more than the property of the prairies. This question will be agitated and an attempt made to secure a separate trial for children and also removal from hardened criminals. The committee for animals will consider the dogs' home scheme, the treatment of cattle, the check rein for horses, etc.

But note that where progress most is, there protection reigns; whereas it is upon the non-progressive, slowgoing States that the free trade cause has to depend for its votes in Congress. What reason is there to suppose that the movement works differently now or that progress and protection will not go together progress and protection will not go together in the future, as they have in the past? Non whatever, we should say. Can you honestly affirm that your favourite cause of free trade is gaining in any nation of the first-class—say member, we leave England out; but just tell us what civilized nation is doing anything to den's famous unfulfilled prophecy. The Free Traders' Strong Belusten.

We continue from yesterday our sketch of what we venture to call the strong delusion of the free traders. This consists, first, in a belief that free trade, or what goes by that mame, is naturally and necessarily associated with political freedom. English Liberals have been crossed, the poposition is foredoomed to failure, all loyal Methodists, if they do not subscribe, will, it is expected, cease open hostility to the project. The Coal Trade.

This last week has been an exceedingly dull one in anthracite coal trade circles, and there is no reason le look for any early improvement. During the last five months there has been an uncommonly heavy demand, which means that there has been a disposition to lay in the winter's auply in advance, so that for the coming menths of the year much less coal will be mined and forwarded. The coal trade has seen its best days, and henceforward the anxiety of the producers to dispose of their production, will not unlikely result in further cuts in prices all along the line.
