BRADFORD, YORKSHIRE.

On Sunday evening last a meeting of the Catholice was convened in this town for the purpose of expressing regret at the unprovoked censures passed on Mr. O'Connell, in a pamphlet recently published, purporting to have been written by the Earl of Shrewsbury; and also of assuring the Liberator of Ireland of their unabated confidence in his policy, as leader of the Catholics, not only of Ireland, but of the united empire. ting was very numerous and respectable.

Mr.Peter Carrick was unanimously voted to the chair, and expressed his regret that the meeting should have been convened for a purpose which necessarily involved a censure on a distin guished member of their own religious communion. But when they found a defaulter among themselves they should be more prompt in censure than in any other case (loud cheers). O'Connell was the champion of Catholicity, and his services in the cause afforded a sufficient guarantee of his fidelity. The catholics could not afford to allow such a man to be censured. As chairman it was his duty to keep order and to hear others, rather than expatiate on the important question which was to come before them that evening. He would therefore call on Mr. Rochfort to propose the first rosolution.

Mr. Rochfort, in the course of his address commented strongly on a passage in the Earl of Shrewsbury's pamphlet in which a most unjust imputation was attempted to be fastened on the character of Mr. O'Connell, namely, that the object of that gentleman's agitation was to have the state funds now bestowed on the establishmen transferred to the support of Catholicity. There could not be a baser libel than this, inasmuch as Mr. O'Connell has, on all occasions, repudiated such an alliance between the Catholic church and the state as the noble earl adverted (cheers) -He himself had heard the present Catholic Pri mate of Ireland condemn, in the most unqualified terms, any proposition which contemplated the pecuniary dependence of the Catholics on the state (cheers). In truth Ireland had such experience of the voluntury system that no temptations sould induce the people to relinquish it. Here the high church folk (parsons, he meent) were so haughty and repulsive, from the circumstance of their independence of the people, that the flock never thought, in the hour of mental disquietude, of secking consolation or condolence from them He asked was such the case with the Catholic clergy? It would be an insult to them for him to become their eulogist. Their character transcended any effort of his at encomium. Not merely a majority of these virtuous imen - the Catholic pricete-but, perhaps, he might say the whole of them recognized O Connell, not only as a political advocate, but as the champion of catholicity, and the friend of the oppressed in all climes and countries (immense cheering) He would, therefore, now perpare the first resolution.

Mr. George Anderson briefly seconded the reso lution.

Carried unanimously

Mr M. Daly, in a very energetic speech proosed the second resolution, and asked, had not O'Counell relieved English lords from the humiliation of being in a political point of view, the inferiors of their own liveried servants? He respected Mr O Connell not merely for the love be had for Ireland, but from the comprehensive character of his (O'Connell's)patriotism. O'Connell was not a sectarian ; he was the friend of the negro as well as the oppressed Irish man. He advocated the rights of England with the same fervour as those of Ireland (immense cheers.) O'Connell's services were not of an Irish, but European character.-Should they, then, forget the man who is respected throughout the civilized world as the liberator of his own countrymon (loud cheering) Mr D then proposed the 2nd resolution.

Mr. Pitzgerald, in a lengthened address, stated the claims of Mr O'Connell to not only the confidence, but the enthusiastic devotion of all Catholics. The speaker observed that Mr O'Connell's character was not to be estimated merely by his parhamentary services, but by his zeal and energy in the cause of Catholicity in the worst of Hamilton, Nov. 24, 1841.

MEETING OF THE CATHOLICS OF days, when English Catholic Lords were tame and spiritless (immense cheering)

Carried unanimously.

Mr O'Leary proposed the third resolution, and ras seconded by Mr J McCabe.

Passed unanimously.

A vote of thanks was proposed and carried, a midst great applause, to Mr Fitzgerald.

After a vote of thanks had been proposed and carried, amid shouts of applause to the shairman, the meeting dispersed.

TIME FOR PAINTING HOUSES .- The Genesee Farmer says that repeated experiments show that paint put upon houses late in autumn or in winter will last far longer then put on in warm weather In cold weather the oll dries on the clapboards and with other ingredients form a durable body but in hot weather the boards absorb oil, and what remains on the surface has but little substance

Boston and Buffalo.—Within a year there will be between Boston and Buffalo a railroad six hundred miles in length It will be possible to go the whole distance by daylight.
