Memorandum re article in Daily of to-day's date

- (1) Story, so far as I can find out, true.
- (2) I have told the Daily that I thought it was extremely poor journalism to publish the article. The news editor agrees as says night editor will be put on the carpet at meeting this evening.
- (3) I have asked Mr. Nesbitt to speak to me about the Chemical Industry Club.
- (4) Dr. E. W. R. Steacie is ^{honorary} president of the club.

Beer Infuses Students With Care-Free Jollity

The even tenor of the business section of McGill street, deeply concerned with the pressing problems of the day, was disrupted yesterday afternoon by a small group of young men, presumably college students, who were seen emerging from a well known brewery with jovial disposition but none too steady gait. They were the remnants of a larger group who had preceded them from this establishment some time previous.

The whole group was originally composed of some 40 odd students. Soberly, they entered the warehouse, but time passed in such surroundings waits for no man, and beer is sure to reap its toll—it did.

The students still retained their faculties after being shown throughout the establishment but many were anticipating what was to come and were anxious for the tour of inspection to be cut short.

Finally the bar was reached and when each had disposed of several glasses of ale, the party wended its way to the reception room. More beer was in order once this room was reached. Music, in the form of piano solos by a well-known student guzzler, accompanied the clinking of steins, and the whole room was pervaded with an atmosphere of jollity.

Some 30 students were sober and willing to obey a command to leave, but some ten others, wishing to overdo a good thing, were adamant. On being warned that they would be locked in, they left, as best they could, and were seen re-entering the bar-room. There they succeeded in inveigling the bartender to give them more free steins of beer. They were finally convinced that they should leave the building. All McGill street was aware of it when they did.

The majority of the Chemical Industry Club, who conducted the tour, were agreed that the machinery and brewing apparatus in Dawes Brewery were of the best; the minority were of the opinion that Dawes ale was good ale, but still would like to see the Black Horse.
