INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH.

CANADA, having decided that re-search work will stimulate and multiply her industries, now seeks to organize this work so as to produce the best results. In regard to the matter. Industrial Canada says:

Another way in which the manufacturers can help is for them to endow departments of industrial rethe Dominion. Our Western University Rump thus praises the kaiser: is excellently situated in an industrial centre, and might develop wonderfully along the lines of industrial research.

The universities must supply the skilled men and rare instruments for this work. Within their walls many of the most intricate experiments might be carried on. Men should be trained there who will be able to go forth into the manufactories, to continue and supervise the investigation there. The state also has a great part to play in this work. There are many small firms which cannot afford to pay specially qualified men, and so their problems go uninvestigated, and the particular industries which they repregent are hampered. Eleven fences surround the twelve shovelfuls of earth that comprise our backyard! Why so much fence should be used to compass a barrowful of ashes and field stones we could never tell! It must be for the cats! They are there every night calling down maledictions on the man who invented the garbage system! Our can is sealed tight, and the cats have declared a blockade! They threat to have us loosen the top of the can, but we merely rip off another bathroom tap and let them have that! But the cats always come back and yow!!

Such work must have the co-operation of the universities, manufacturers and state. Each has his particular part to play, and each will find profit in the result. The manufacturers will feel the various industries growing larger and more vigorous under the influence of academically conducted industrial research, the universities will have a new field one companies while the state will grow in wealth and increased and another profession to which their students may aspire, while the state will grow in wealth and lational importance, as its industries expand.
