Selling the Maritimes To the West

Beatty of the Canadian Pacific Railway has personally manifested his interest in it. Sir Henry Thornton has also promised to assist in every way possible. In fact the two largest transportation companies in Canada, and therefore two of the largest transportation companies in the world, have promised to second the efforts of these papers to their uttermost.

It is not Mr. Belding's intention to enter upon a recital of the trials and tribulations of the Maritime Provinces. He is not engaged in a begging expedition. He will not preach secession. But he will point out to the people of the West the unrest that prevails in the Maritime Provinces, so acute the advantages of freight shipments over railways in which the Canadian people, including those of the Maritime Provinces, have expended hundreds of millions of dollars. The ability of Canadian ports to handle all Canadian traffic will be laid before the shipping public. If these facilities are not ample, then it is taken for granted that the improvement necessary to have Canadian trade pass through Canadian channels will be provided.

THERE is another angle, however, to Mr. Belding's trip and that is the answer which he will receive. Not only will he be engaged in an effort to explain the position of Canadian national ports to our fellow Canadians, but he will tell their side of the story to the readers of these papers day after day. The viewpoint of the man in the manufacturing centre, as well as that of the grain-grower of the West, will be given in the columns of The Telegraph-Journal and Times-Star day by day.

The management of The Telegraph-Journal and the Times-Star believes that this is the best possible way to bring about a better understanding between the East and the West. Newspapers in various parts of Canada have offered their co-operation in ensuring the success of this effort, and those who are cognizant of the full value of the power of the press must realize that the story of the Port of St. John and the Canadian ports will be well told before Mr. Belding's return.

MR. BELDING is a well-known writer, having an experience extending over several decades, most of which has been gained in the Maritime Provinces and this enables him to intelligently present our case. The same ability will ensure to the readers of The Telegraph-Journal and Times-Star intelligent and comprehensive statements of what the men who live inland think of our case. Every business man in the Maritime Provinces should acquaint himself with the facts that this mission will reveal. Once weaknesses in our claims are established, there will be opportunity to correct any disability under which the eastern ports, at least, labor in the effort to handle Canadian trade.

The first of the articles dealing with Mr. Belding's trip west, will appear in Monday's Telegraph-Journal and Times-Star, in which he will tell of his reception on the threshold of his journey to Montreal. There Mr. Belding will get his first insight into the difficulties which he may encounter or in the encouragement he may receive.

THE job has started. Let us hope that as far as these papers may be able to carry on, the benefits will be at least sufficiently apparent to encourage others to follow the lead set in an effort to bring St. John, Halifax and other Canadian ports that large measure of shipping which we of the Maritime Provinces believe is our due.

There's Health for You In My Treatment

As a woman, like you I have endured headaches, backaches, constipation, nervous attacks, sleeplessness, experience and ability under which the eastern ports, at least, labor in the effort to handle Canadian trade.

COW REFUSED TO RESPOND

Pat on Back Fails to Produce Milk.

A city business man decided that in order to complete his happiness he needed a little place in the country, and a cow. Three days after purchasing his cow from a neighboring farmer, he lured the following attack upon the son of soil: "You have cheated me. The cow is no good. She gives no milk. I have placed a pat under her and patted her back, but she does not respond." Of course, the cow needed more than a pat on the back. And the same applies to the Purty and have got a good many pats on the back, but they need something more than pats. They need your order for your daily milk supply, and the more orders they receive, the more secure the low price of milk becomes. Tell your friends to back up Purty.
