JOY.

's joy in the music of morning bells
t floats like a spirit through wild wood dells,
d echoes away o'er the green old hills;
y in the lullaby babble of rills,
y in the beauty of grand old trees,
nd Joy in the humming of honey-bees.
oy in the clear ringing laugh of a child,
nd Joy in a ramble through woodland wild;
oy in the cloud-ship that sails o'er the sky,
oy in a laughing babe's beautiful eye.
oy in the stars, on the bosom of night;
Joy in rich lips when you put out the light:
joy in those cousinly strawberry strolls,
Through the green meadows, o'er the bright knolls.

Joy in the harvest of hay, fruit and grain,
Joy in the patter of soft summer rain.
Joy in a troop of wild, frolicksome boys,
Cutting wild capers with boisterous noise.
Joy in the tinkle of feet in a dance,
Joy in improving an opportune chance.
Joy in a "quilting," and joy in a glee
Of old fashioned "husking" or "apple bee."
Joy in a "spelling school," joy in the sports
Of "sliding down hill," of building "snow forts"
"School exhibitions," and "sugar camp fun;"
Joy in most everything, under the sun!
Joy in my spirit, when this I begun:
Double in quantity, now that I've done.

GEORGIAN SLAVES.—These unhappy creatures, who are embarked at Trebisond on board steamers, reach Constantinople in a very pitiable state. We can imagine an European reader almost envying the captain under whose care is placed so poetic a cargo; but alas, the truth is, that the Georgians are looked upon almost as suspiciously as a hundred cases of leeches for the Marseilles market. It is true they are separated as much as possible from the rest of the passengers, penned in like a flock of sheep, and hidden by dirty cloth; or in bad weather crammed below, like negroes, in the middle passage. In spite of these precautions, the whole vessel suffers from their presence. Nearly every one of them has the itch; and without exception every one of them brings away a colony of vermin. This is easily accounted for. The poor things resemble not a bevy of English maidens going out voluntarily to seek for husbands in the barracks of Madras or Calcutta. They are sold from poverty and avarice by their parents or friends, and are handed over nearly naked to the purchaser. To dress them would eat up all the profits. A ragged shift and piece of canvas wrapped round their shoulders—such is the costume in which they crowd by day and huddle together by night, whispering or dreaming of the splendour which was promised them, to dispel their sorrow or their sickness, and perhaps giving a passing thought to the home which has cast them forth, like the pet lamb when it has outgrown the fondness or the patience of its mistress. The merchant, with the unscrupulating stupidity which characterises all dealers in human flesh, fattens these future sultanas during the voyage on water and millet flour porridge. They arrive at their journey's end in such a state that few connoisseurs in incipient beauty would venture to pronounce an opinion.—Sometimes, when the owner is in haste to realise, he drives his Georgian flock to market in the unseemly condition in which they come ashore or at most throws around them a ferigeh—the mantle of the Turkish women. Chance, for the most part, presides over the sale. The purchaser keeps at a respectful distance from his acquisition, as a doctor might from a plague patient; and drives her before him to what might be called a preparatory school for the harem. A number of old women, gain their living by polishing up this rough material; curing them by remedies of which they have the secret, of their diseases, combing their hair into sha e, scrubbing them, and exterminating the reminiscences they have brought with them from their native hovels.

AN INTERESTING HEIRLOOM.—This is a strange tale, but as we have a reference to living witnesses, there seems a sufficient voucher for the family belief:—

In the family of Lord Muncaster there is preserved, as the most precious heir-loom, an ancient glass vessel, which was presented by Henry VI. to the head of the house of Pennington, a zealous adherent of the Red Rose. During his season of greatest adversity, that unfortunate monarch was concealed for many weeks in the mansion of his faithful servant, Sir John de Pennington. When concealment there was no longer practicable, the King prepared to carry his broken fortunes elsewhere; but before his departure he thus addressed his loyal host:—"Silver and gold and jewels have I none to give; but this I will give, and along with it, the blessing of the most unfortunate of princes." Thereupon, he presented to Sir John the curiously shaped carved glass cup in which he used to keep his holy water; and kneeling down and praying that every blessing might await the loyal friend who had shown such constancy to him under his heavy misfortunes, he implored God that a mail heir might never be wanting to his to his ancient race. Sir John and his decendants have ever since carefully preserved the precious loyal gift as the talisman of their house; and it is the traditional belief of the family, that, as long as King Henry's cup is preserved entire, a male heir shall never be wanting to the race of Pennington. Upwards of half a century ago, the box in which the cup is enclosed fell to the ground. Great fears were felt lest it might have sustained injury; yet no one had courage to ascertain the fact, and the box remained shut for many years. At length it was opened; and to the great joy of the family, it was found quite uninjured. The heir male of the Penningtons is the present Lord Muncaster; while the heir line is Lord Lindsay, in right of his late mother the Countess of Crawford and Balcarres, who was daughter to Sir John Pennington, first Lord Muncaster.—Burke's Peerage.

SCENE IN AN AMERICAN COURT OF JUSTICE.—Mr. B——, a distinguished advocate and attorney-general of a fair down-east state, was sitting with his hat over his eyes, and his chin on his breast, bolstered up on either side with chairs and tables, and sleeping as comfortably as "the indomitable spirit of gin" would allow, in the court-house at A——, when the judge entered and took his seat on the bench. Observing the situation of Mr. B——, who had not changed on entrance of 'the court,' the judge looked at the sheriff, who seemed to understand that it was his duty to get the sleeper into proper condition, and said to him—"Mr B—— the court is in." We wont give the reply; suffice it to say, the sheriff had a decided objection to going to the place to which he was consigned. "Mr. B——," said the judge, "we have observed with profound regret, your conduct during the last week, and this morning we find you in no better condition to take up your cases than before. We are disposed to bear with you no longer. You disgrace yourself and your family, the court, and the profession, by your course of conduct." This reproof elicited the following colloquy: "Did your-r hon-our-r speak to me?" "I did, sir." "What re-mark di-did ye-your honor-r make?" "I said, sir, that in my opinion you disgrace yourself and your family, the court, and the profession, by your course of conduct." "May i-i-it please your-r honour, I've been an at-at-torn-ey in-in-in this c-ocurt for fifteen year-rs, and pe-permit me to say, your honor, that it is the first c-c-cor-rect opinion I ever knew you to give."

In a tumbler, three parts filled with water drop two or three small lumps of phosphuret of lime; a decomposition will take place, and phosphuretted hydrogen gas be produced, bubbles of which will rise to the surface, when they immediately take fire and explode, terminating in beautiful ringlets of smoke. This is the same kind of gas which is generated at the bottom of shallow pools of stagnant water, in boggy and marshy places, and in graveyards. It becomes ignited by the contact with the air, and is called ignis fatuus, or Will-o-the Wisp.

DIGNITY OF AN INDIAN CHIEF.—We doubt if the annals of ancient history furnish a reply surpassing in eloquence and grandeur the following, from an untutored savage:

As Tecumseh proudly approached, Gen. Harrison rose to receive the chief, and pointing to a bench prepared for the purpose, said:

"You white father requests you to be seated."

Tecumseh cast upon the American general a look of unmitigated scorn and indignation.

"You, my father!" said he. "No! The sun," pointing to that luminary in the heavens, "is my father! The earth," pointing to the ground, "is my mother! Both," throwing himself on the ground, "I will rest on her bosom!"

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

CURE OF A DISORDERED LIVER AND BAD DIGESTION.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. R. W Kirkus, Chemist 7, Prescot Street, Liverpool, dated 6th June, 1851.

To Professor HOLLOWAY,

SIR,—Your Pills and Ointment have stood the highest on our sale list of Proprietary Medicines for some years. A customer, to whom I can refer for any enquiries, desires me to let you know the particulars of her case. She had been troubled for years with a disordered liver and bad digestion. On the last occasion, however, the virulence of the attack was so alarming, and the inflammation set in so severely, that doubts were entertained of her not being able to bear up under it; fortunately she was induced to try your Pills, and she informs me that after the first, and each succeeding dose, she had great relief. She continued to take them, and although she used only three Boxes, she is now in the enjoyment of perfect health. I could have sent you many more cases, but the above from the severity of the attack, and the speedy cure, I think, speaks much in favour of your astonishing Pills. (Signed)

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF RHEUMATIC FEVER, IN VAN DIEMEN'S LAND.

Copy of a Letter inserted in the Hobart Town Courier of the 1st March, 1851, by Major J. Welch.

Margaret M'Connigan, nineteen years of age, residing at New Town, had been suffering from a violent rheumatic fever for upwards of two months, which had entirely deprived her of the use of her limbs; during this period she was under the care of the most eminent medical men in Hobart Town, and by them her case was considered hopeless. A friend prevailed upon her to try Holloway's celebrated Pills, which she consented to do, and in an incredible short space of time they effected a perfect cure.

CURE OF A PAIN AND TIGHTNESS IT THE CHEST AND STOMACH OF A PERSON EIGHTY-FOUR YEARS OF AGE.

From Messrs. Thew & Son, Proprietors of the Lynn Advertiser, who can vouch for the following statement.—August 2nd, 1851.

To Professor HOLLOWAY.

SIR,—I desire to bear testimony to the good effects of Holloway's Pills. For some years I suffered severely from a pain and tightness in the stomach which was also accompanied by a shortness of breath, that prevented me from walking about. I am 84 years of age, and notwithstanding my advanced state of life, these Pills have so relieved me, that I am desirous that others should be made acquainted with their virtues. I am now rendered, by their means, comparatively active, and can take exercise without inconvenience or pain, which I could not do before. (Signed) HENRY COE.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF THE GRAVEL, AND A MOST DANGEROUS LIVER COMPLAINT.

Copy of a Letter addressed to J. K. Heydon, Esq., Sidney, New South Wales, dated February 25, 1851.

SIR,—A Mr. Thomas Clark, a Settler at Lake George, for a considerable time seriously afflicted with a Complaint of the Liver, together with the Gravel. His medical attendants, after trying all their professional skill, candidly told him that his case was hopeless, and any further efforts useless. In this situation, and when expecting every day would terminate his existence, a friend recommended him to try Holloway's Pills, and as a forlorn hope he did so, the first dose gave him considerable relief, he therefore persevered in taking them according to the directions, and is now restored to perfect health. He will feel great pleasure in confirming this statement, or even make an affidavit to the same effect, should it be required. (Signed) WILLIAM JONES,

Proprietor of the Goulburn Herald, New South Wales.
