PROGRESS SATURDAY, MAY 7 1898

It happened in 1870, which is still spok-for of as the "terrible year" in Bois le Duc by the war between France and Prussia bad geed all about them, but not a soldier had been seen in the tiny villinge, for which the peasants daily thanked their stars. The old man who lived alone with his son Charles, in lhe chateau above the young his title had vanquished with his states long before, firmly believed that france was on the yroad to ruin, but he scoffed at the idea that the Prussians would ever invade French territory. But one fine summer morning Bois-le-music and a body of Prussians soldiers, invent de Prussians, and there before the old chateau the order to halt was given the old soldier had seen their coming and had prepared, according to his own ideas, to receive them. From an upper window the Fussian officers staried to enter the busse, to learn the meaning of this hostil digslay, he was met by the old man, who had dressed himself in his ancient uniform at eroom. It was soon discovered that the strange, silent lad was a valuable member of the company on account of his knowledge of woodcraft and his absolute fearlessness. Important scouting duty was entrusted to him, and after a time he became the cap-tain of the most daring of all the bands of the bands of the franc-tireur. His little company was a constant aggravation to the Prussians, a very thorn in the sides of division commanders.

II.

One aiternoon, shortly after the second visit of the Prussians to Bois-le-Duc, little Marie Duret was alone in her parents' cot-tage while they were at work in the fields. Marie was a comely little maiden, a dark-eyed, nut-brown peasant girl, and though not a dozen summers had passed over her heed, she was a neat, thorough going little housewife. Although her home stood quite apart from the other cottages and not far from the great forest, so that it could apart from the great forest, so that it could scarcely be colled a part of Bois-le-Duc at all. To-day she had set the house in order, had swept the floor and has plied beside the large brick oven a heap of taggots against the morrow's baking. All her tasks com-pleted, Marie took possession of a low chair and began sedately to amuse herself with a large rag doll, her one playmate and in-separable companion. Now, it happened that on this very more

O, yes, a soldier just came in here and left that,' pointing to an old masket of her father's which stood in the corner of the room, 'bat he is gone now,' ahe added. She carefully related to the Prussians how the franc-tireur had taken the path that led from the rear of the cottage to the forest.

now the tranc-their had taken the path that led from the rear of the cottage to the forest. The girl answered his questions so readily that it was hard for the officers to suspect her of decerving him, but he ordered his men to make a thorough search of the cottage. They looked in closets and cupboards and rummaged the lott. One of the men in passing opened the oven door and glanced in. Marie's heart almost ceased beating, but she gave no sign of ber alarm. Seeing nothing but the beap of faggots the man closed the door. Marie could hardly keep from heaving a sigh of relief; it seemed in her own mind that she must shout for joy. As they were preparing to leave one of the men asked: 'Shall we not fire the cottage ?'

COAST DEFENOES, OF ENGLAND. Linked Protection by Wires Which Centre

It can no longer be said that Great Britain is unprotected. The coast defences were never more complete or efficient. Right around our shores stretch these many defences, not isolated and therefore of little account, but forming a linked protection, with the telegraph or telephone at hand to respond at naval headquarters in London to the slightest warning, and from Whitehall there branch off private wires to the great arsenals of Portsmouth, Devonport,

A few words from any point on the coast, be it an isolated coastguard station or a lonely guardship, may in an hour or two have led to orders of national import being flashed over sleeping towns and villages to the naval commanders-in-chief at the coast, and before the outside world knows of impending danger all the machinery of defence will be in

By the time the world was awake the preparations for commissioning the ships had commenced and in a few days a squadron of powerful modern vessels was fitted out and ready for any task. When the necessity arises no less promotly will the necessity arises no less promptly will the machinery of defence be again put to the test, possibly on a more extensive what clothing is to the body. It is just as important. You should take as much care in selecting the paint to clothe your property, as you do in selecting the material to clothe your person. Paint pre-serves the building. Paint gives beauty to the building. In painting the labor costs more than the paint. There will be a large waste if the right paint is not used.

Now, it happened that on this very morn-ing Captain Charles, the franc tireur, having Captain Charles, the franc friet, hav-ing gone out on a reconnoitering expedi-tion, had been cut off from bis men by half a dozen Prussian cavalrymen, and had to run for bis life. The Duret cottage was the only one near him, and so, while Marie sat talking to her doll, the door was sud-caply burst once and the solder runked in sat taising to her doil, the door was sud-denly burst open and the soldier rushed in. Marie knew at once that it was Captain Charles, for she had often seen him about the village, and as she had heard of his brave deeds in aid of the French, she was

are on my track. Marie had heard those stories of the Prussians and her heart sink with fear at the thought of facing such monsters. Nevertheless she showed herself a brave little woman. For an iostant she glanced helplessly around the room. Truly there were few hiding places in the little cottage. Then her eyes iell on the large baking oven and her busy little brain found a way out of the difficulty. She quickly bade then she filled it with the loose faggots Scarcely was her work finished when she heard a loud knocking on the door and a Prussian officer entered. He stopped, abashed, when he saw only the little maid before him. Perhaps the thought of some little girl that he had left behind in the fatherland came to his mind, fer the look in his eyes was quite gentle and his voice trembled in spite of himself when he spoke. "We saw a man enter this house just now,' he said. "Tell me, my little maid, where he is."

Their movements were not rigid, but undulatory, in a vertical sense. They dived when a shot was fired at them Several similar creatures were seen or Feb. 15 this year, and were fired at when
