

TARDIEU REPORTS ON WHAT FRANCE DID FOR THE ALLIES

Exactly what France has done to rebuild herself since war came to an end, what the actual near future for her is likely to be, what France did for the United States and for her other Allies, and what the real weight upon her is now, was told in a formal statement of facts and figures prepared by Andre Tardieu, former French High Commissioner to the United States, and made public by John Moffat, in behalf of the French Heroes Fund of 2 West 45th street, New York City.

Mr. Moffat, who has just returned from France, where he has been for some months, is also the Vice-Chairman of the Federation of American Agencies for Relief in France.

In giving out this official information, Mr. Moffat said that the French Heroes Fund believed the American people should know precisely what France had accomplished and what material for war services in addition to her own heavy burden.

"For this reason, and knowing that France would not otherwise make them public, the French Heroes Fund," Mr. Moffat added, "applied to the French Government for details America. The French Government should not remain ignorant of certain striking achievements of France, far greater than we ever here realized. The French Government gladly furnished us the information. From the details Captain Tardieu now Minister of the Liberated Regions, has given us, these striking facts and figures seem especially interesting."

"Out of 2,345 kilometers of destroyed railway lines, France made 2,028 kilometers ready for use by the end of September. Out of 1,160 bridges, she constructed 620. Out of 1,070 kilometers of canals, 700 were made ready for use at the end of August. And 460,000 tons of stolen industrial material have been recovered in Germany and Belgium, 120,000 having already been given back to their owners."

"In agriculture, the figures are, even more extraordinary. 18,000,000 hares were rendered useless through the war, 400,000 of these were in process of cultivation by the first of September, 200,000 had been cleared of projectiles of all kinds, nearly 10,000,000 of barbed wire entanglements had been removed and 60,000,000 meters of trenches filled in. Two hundred thousands of the 300,000 agricultural instruments destroyed or removed have been replaced, the 3,220,000 homes in France in 1913 are all most entirely re-established and 200,000 heads of cattle have been replaced out of 1,300,000."

"These are but a few of the figures from the records of the French government of what France has done to build herself up. Out of 550,000 houses destroyed or damaged, 60,000 have been sufficiently repaired to be utilized, more than 15,000 huts have been erected and 60,000 others are in process of construction."

"By Sept. 30, 2,360 millions in money as well as in material had been spent for the rebuilding of various destroyed industrial factories."

"All the world knows," Mr. Moffat said, "that France made possible the common victory in breaking, from 1914 to 1918, the first German shock. But one knows less of what her industry did for the Allies, despite invasions. From the tables furnished, I see that of all this material 71,713,644 francs worth of artillery, ammunition and motor cars went to England, 27,213,224 of the same to Italy, 65,022,926 of the same to Roumania, 1,252,626,134 to Russia, 150,000,000 to Belgium, 1,431,673,616 to the United States, besides 6,500 machine guns and 56,876 rifles to England, 311,000 rifles to Italy, 298,000 rifles to Roumania, 550,000 rifles to Russia, the supplies including contributions also to Serbia, Greece, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Portugal, Finland, Switzerland, Montenegro, Sweden, Spain and Japan."

"Nobody knows I am sure of the supplies France gave to the countries that helped her at the same moment she had her own prodigious burden to carry."

"Now here is something even more interesting. I find from the figures Captain Tardieu has furnished, that incontestably, in the most material way, France enabled the American Army to arrive for the battle of 1918. America knows what America did for France, but as Captain Tardieu says, it is more difficult for the French, because of the distance, to explain what France did for the American Army. To equip that army in time it was necessary for France to furnish it with a large part of its war material, particularly its artillery and ammunition."

"This is what was done. (I am not quoting directly from the statement of Captain Tardieu's. France had furnished until the time of the armistice: 3,834 guns, 10 million shells, 3,800 airplanes, 240 tanks.

Thousands of machine guns, 1,115, m'railleurs and machines of all sorts. France put at the disposition of the American Staff, 1,500 officers in France and 500 in America, her schools, 17 instruction camps, six artillery camps 43 barracks, 36 billeting zones representing citizens of 15,000 Km. 30,000 hospital beds and 100,000 places for the sick men and wounded in public or private establishments: 300 trains per day.

France furnished to the A. E. F.: 136,881 horses, 50,000 quintaux of bread, 60,000 quintaux of meat, 150,000 quintaux of potatoes, 25,000 quintaux of vegetables; 780,000 quintaux of coal, 1,000,000 quintaux of wood, 2,100,000 cubic meters of wood (not cut), 450,000 quintaux of forage, 19,900 hectolitres gasoline.

"That is to say a mass and weight of material which corresponded to a saving of 3,315,507 shipping tons. This figure shows its importance if one remembers the tonnage transported from America was:

"From June, 1917, to May, 1918, 2,156,228 tons.

"From June, 1918 to November, 1918, 4,539,425 tons."

"An official American report shows that nearly half of the material used by the A. E. F. until the time of the armistice, nearly seven millions of tons have been furnished by France."

"Our demands, says the same report, were very large, continual and urgent. Every concession made to the A. E. F. meant a restriction for a fraction of the French people and of her heroic army."

"On the date of the armistice, the material in the line of the American Army had been furnished by France at the rate of 100 per 100 for the cannons of 75, the cannons of 105, the cannons of 155, the cannons of 165, the cannons of 240, the cannons of 300, the cannons of 350, the cannons of 420, the cannons of 480, the cannons of 540, the cannons of 600, the cannons of 660, the cannons of 720, the
