A Relic of Barbarism. good things are held to be as nothing in Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate: good things are held to be as nothing in comparison with the right of every man to the enjoyment of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness in his own way. Every man is free to do as he will, so long as he keeps within the limits defined by laws enacted by legislators elected by the people. Every man who has not been found guilty of a criminal act, or against whom there is not evidence sufficient to warrant his being placed on trial for a violation of the law, is supposed to be as free as the wind that blows. locked up nearly two years because they were so unfortunate as to be employed in the hallway of the Grand Central Hotel at the time of the killing of Col. Fisk—we say their appearance was the most interesting feature of the trial, for they are the living testimony to one of the saddest abuses of our system of law. They had committed no offense. They were accidentally present or near at hand when a man was shot, and so the law cast them into prison to make sure that they should be on hand when it wanted to hear their story. That they were poor and depend-into prison to make sure that they should be on hand when it wanted to hear their story. That they were poor and dependant upon their daily labor made no matter; rather it was because they were poor and unable to furnish heavy ball that the courts locked them up. Our Constitution embodies an especial probibition against such a crying wrong: "Witnesses shall not be unreasonably "detained," are the words it uses. But, untortunately, this guarantee of the Constitution is rendered almost nugatory by the statute of 1845, which empowers the District Attorney to hold the witnesses from term to term as the cause may be postponed, and so the witnesses from term to term as the cause may be postponed, and so the witnesses repowerless to be relieved from imprisonment and powerless to obtain damages for their detention; and none can tell when this will end; we have had two trials already, and who knows but we may have another?

HALIFAX, Oct. 4, 1871.

James I. Fellows, Esq.—Dear Sir:
Our sale of your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites has been very large, and notwithstanding its high price, has far exceeded that of any other medicine. We have had from you within the past year six hundred cases of one dozen each, which has gone into almost every part of the Province, and given, so far as we know, Universal Satisfaction.

As it is no "quack medicine," but compounded, as we believe, upon the sound principles of Pharmaceutical science, we trust you will not allow the public to lose sight of a remedy so well calculated to be of Permanent Value. Very respectfully.
