

THE QUARTERLY OFFICIAL BOARD.

In the economy of Methodism, the representative form of government is found. Our laws are framed by the General Conference which meets every four years, and is composed of equal numbers of ministers and laymen. The Annual Conference also is made up of ministers and laymen in equal numbers; while in the local church the Quarterly Official Board is the highest court. It directs all other organizations, and to it they are responsible. It forms a court of appeal in the trial of members and supervises all local operations of the church within the limits prescribed by Discipline. It sends its representatives to the District Meeting, from which delegates are appointed to the Annual Conference, and from among these delegates, laymen are elected to attend the General Conference. These arrangements give to the Methodist Church a character commonly known as Connexionalism, by which a common interest extends to the utmost bounds of the church. The Quarterly Official Board of Grace Church is at present composed as follows:
