it to appear that he is the one responsible for forcing the issue.

I was talking with Dr. and Mrs. Hewitt on Saturday, and both were looking very well. Naturally we were speaking of Lady Borden and yourself, and I could see how pleased they both were at the progress you had made.

You will be pleased to know that my brother, the doctor, is doing well. He has made really remarkable headway, is now walking about quite a little, and looking forward to resuming his practice in Colorado before the end of this year. I really believe he will reach that ultimate aim. My father has had to resign from the Law School on account of all but total blindness. The Law Society, however, has recognized his lifelong service by making him Lecturer Emeritus, and allowing him a portion of his salary. Except for his blindness, he and my mother seem better this year than they were last.

I hope Lady Borden is very well. Please give my kindest remembrances to her; also to Mrs. Clarke; and with the best of wishes and kindest remembrances to yourself. Believe me, as ever, dear Sir Frederick,

Yours sincerely,

W. L. MACKENZIE KING
