"The country is comparatively new, the experiences of the travellers are peculiar, and the style fluent and animated."—Sat. Rev., xl, 81.

"The foot-journey through the heart of the Caucasus here recorded was undertaken in the summer of 1874 by four Englishmen, a Swiss guide, and an interpreter. Few books of travel are thoroughly enjoyable except to those who have already some acquaintance with the regions described. Among these few 'The Frosty Caucasus' may, I think, be reckoned."—DOUGLAS W. FRESHFIELD: Acad., lx, 1.

Grove, Sir George, D.C.L., b. 1823; was educated as an engineer. He was secretary to the Society of Arts 1848-52, secretary and afterwards director of the Crystal Palace Company, and editor of Macmillan's Magazine for ten years. He became director of the Royal College of Music in 1882, and was knighted in 1885. 1. Geography, ("History Primers.") Lon., 1875, 16mo. 2. (Ed.) A Dictionary of Music and Musicians, A.D. 1450-1875. "The various aspects and details of the subject are dealt with by men specially familiar with them, and the result is a collection of a vast body of accurate information. . . . Whether the reader desires to comprehend the meaning of some technical term, or to know the peculiarities of a composer's style, or the incidents of his life, or finally to get up the history of a musical society or of a musical publisher, his needs will be amply met by the present dictionary."—*Sat. "The general plan of the work is judicious. The first part contains a commentary on the fragments which compose the title; the second part is a systematic exposition of the law of damage to property. But the execution is open to some objections. . . . All shows the work of a competent Roman lawyer."—II. J. Roy.: Acad., xxix, 373.
