

Viper's Bugloss.

VIPER'S BUGLOSS.

This weedy, prickly denizen of roadsides and waste places attracts frequent attention with its conspicuous wand of pretty bluish-purple flowers and pink buds. It is a biennial and can be easily destroyed by spudding before the seeds are ripe.

BURS.—HOUND'S TONGUE.

The common bur is well known in every part of Canada. It is seldom seen in crops and is easily destroyed by spudding. The rough barbed seeds are perhaps most injurious by getting tangled the wool of sheep and the hair of dogs.
