

II. FEBRUARY hath XXVIII Days. 1795.

No playful lambkins now are seen
To frisk in gamefome bound;
No tender milk-maid's sonnet's heard
From all the mead around.
No thrush nor lark's melodious strains
Salute the list'ning ear;
No sportive swallow's on the wing,

The drooping mind to cheer.
And Sol, from distant southern skies,
Where he refulgent shines, Now darts his pallid beams on us
In horizontal lines.
Or e're a tenfold cloud obstructs
His sickly feeble rays,
And all that we do here enjoy
Are transient twilight days.
