

SCIENTIFIC FARMING

The School of Scientific Farming began operations on the belief that the farmers of Western Canada were eager for information and advice, provided it came from sources which they considered valuable and authoritative. Consequently the whole North American continent was scoured, regardless of expense, for the very best men from a practical, as well as from a theoretical standpoint. The result is that the men who have prepared our course are experts, every man of them a leader in his particular line; each lesson is the final word on the subject with which it deals.

Even the oldest, the most experienced, the most successful farmer can learn something from these men.

Two of our students called at the School last week. Both of them over 50 years young. Both of them top-notch farmers, thirty-bushel per acre men, old timers who have grown up with the West. They came in to tell us how much they appreciated and enjoyed the work of the School and to boost for the Better Farming movement.

Because this is not a movement carried on by arm chair theorists, it has back of it these great practical experts, the men whose faces are tanned by exposure to the glaring sun, whose hands are calloused by contact with the levers and the reins, and whose feet have often been weary from the daily tramp over the cultivated soil.

The Plan originated by the School of Scientific Farming makes it possible for you to consult with these men and secure their advice on your farm problems just as readily as if they were right out on your land, standing at your very elbow.

YOUR INSTRUCTORS

Professor H. L. Bolley, Dean, North Dakota Agricultural College
 Norman M. Ross, Chief of Forestry Div., Indian Head, Sask.
 Professor C. I. Gunness, North Dakota Agricultural College
 Professor R. M. Dolve, North Dakota Agricultural College
 Professor E. C. Elford, Macdonald Agricultural College
 Professor S. A. Bedford, Manitoba Agricultural College
 Professor Thos. Shaw, Minnesota Experimental Station.
 E. F. Coke, B. S. A., Supt., Educational Department
 Professor C. H. Lee, Manitoba Agricultural College
 James Murray, Wheatlands Ltd., Suffield, Alberta
 R. E. Drennan, Pioneer Stock Farm, Canora, Sask.
 W. H. Fairfield, Lethbridge Experimental Farm
 Professor W. H. Day, Guelph Agricultural Coll.
 Arch. Mitchell, Weed Expert, Coaldale, Alta.

Cut out the coupon at the lower left-hand corner and learn more about this Better Farming movement.

The Correspondence School of Scientific Farming of Western Canada Limited

5 EDWARD BUILDING
 (Opposite Eaton's)
 WINNIPEG

If you are one of those who do not claim to "know it all," realize that the introduction of scientific methods will enable you to stop leaks and increase the productivity of your soil, we bid you welcome. We want you to step up and shake hands with the scores of earnest young men and enthusiastic old men who have joined this Better Farming movement.

Fill out the coupon below—it does not obligate you in any way—and send it in to us. Our booklet, which will go forward by return mail, will give you the whole story.

CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF SCIENTIFIC FARMING, WINNIPEG

Please send me free, postage paid, your booklet on "BETTER FARMING."

Name.....

Address.....

The most convincing proof of the value of our service is found in the scores of letters we receive from satisfied students.

"I must say your course is being taught more thoroughly than I thought. I know it will be a great help to me."—H. S. Eatock, Bounty, Sask. Dec. 30, '11

"As the lessons proceed I am becoming more interested and I think the course is the best investment I have ever made."—Wm. C. B. Wood, Evesham, Sask., January 3, 1912.

"This course is something I have been wanting for a long time, that is, to know something about the calling I am engaged in. It is almost impossible for a married man to attend college with so many other duties to take his attention, and the course is a great boon to me."—Richard Brigham, Deleah, Sask., December 15, 1911

Macpherson - McCurry
 Advertis. Agency