PROGRESS OF THE WAR

[August 30 to September 5.]

IN the week under review the war entered the thirty-eighth month of its course, and no sign of its termination was manifest. The result of the week's hostilities on the Western and Italian fronts was satisfactory to the Entente Allies, but the reverse was true on the Eastern front.

The outstanding event of the week was the retreat of the Russians in the Riga sector. The town itself, after some resistance, was abandoned to the Germans, who crossed the Dvina in places almost without opposition.

There was practically no news of the Mesopotamian and Egyptian campaigns in the course of the week. In East Africa Belgian and British troops effected a junction about a hundred miles southwest of Kilossa and not far from Mahenge, near which the Germans are expected to make their final stand.

The Balkan campaign was not distinguished by any outstanding event during the week, though hostilities were continuously in progress. The Austro-Italian campaign resulted in another satisfactory week for the Italians, who completed the capture of San Gabriele mountain, the last of the heights on the left bank of the Isone north of Gorizia held by the Austrians.

England suffered from three hostile air raids during the week on three successive nights, Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday. The first one was at Dover, where little damage was done and no casualty reported. The second one extended as far as Chatham, and in the result 107 persons were killed and 86 wounded.

Under 'News of the Sea' we give, as usual, the reports of the shipping disasters appearing in the daily press during the week. These reports are now being held for the most part, and the accounts of the results of submarine activity are being largely restricted to a weekly numerical summary.

Mr. W. G. Thomson, of Bocabec Cove, was in town this week, and was looking remarkably well for a man approaching the four score mark. It is a great pleasure to younger men to listen to Mr. Thomson's reminiscences, so interestingly told; and all wish him a much greater prolongation of life.

Mr. Albert Waycott, of Cleveland, Ohio, arrived in town last week and is staying at the Algonquin. Previously to coming here he spent a few weeks at Bar Harbor, Me. Mr. Waycott is an old St. Andrews boy who is strongly attached to his native town, and seldom misses a year without paying it a visit; and no former townsman is more cordially welcomed than he.
