SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN HOME-STEAD REGULATIONS

THIS sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency on certain conditions).

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within five miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section along-side his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after creating homesteaded patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions. A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $200.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Enlarged offerings from first hands gave the wheat market today a downward turn. Prices showed weak, ¼c to 1½c off. Corn lost ¼c to ½c net and oats ¼c to ½c. There was an irregular finish in provisions ranging from 10c decline to an advance of 12½c. After ten days of almost continuous climb, the wheat seemed to many dealers to be in a position where any bearish developments would have unusual weight. In this connection signs that are continued bulge in prices had induced rural holders in the northwest to accept bids more freely than sufficient reason to cause extensive profit-taking here on the part of recent buyers. Nonewithstanding that considerable rallying power was shown, especially after the first break in prices the market closed at the lowest point of the day.

WAR STORIES FROM FRONT

(Pall Mall Gazette.)

I met him at Euston. He looked pale and tired, and his khaki uniform had lost its fresh smartness. His boots obviously had not been cleaned for a long time, and he limped as he walked along the platform.

He got into the carriage where I had comfortably settled in my favorite corner, and half sat, half fell, on the cushioned seat. For a minute or two he gave himself up to rest; the exertion had tired him, it was evident. "Feel a bit stiff?" he remarked, after he had recovered. "Just came out of hospital. Hole in my side. Knocked out for a time." A long pause. "But I'll get 'em again, don't you worry?" He looked at me fiercely, as if waiting to challenge any statement I might make suggesting in any way that he looked as if he would not be able for a long time to gratify his desire.

"Ten days will be enough for me. Going to the wife, who is with her folks now at B—. I say, where is B—. I've never met her folks yet. That's where I've got to. You're going that way? Right, sir! I'll hang on to you if you'll let me. Get a bit mixed, you know, round these junctions."

"This is the wife and kiddie." He drew out two photos from inside his tunic and handed them over for my approval. "Carried them all through the scrap, sir! They'll be glad to see me, eh?"

The carriage filled up and conversation became general. Two hours later a soldier and I got out. In another ten minutes we were in a carriage by ourselves on a branch line train, en route to B—, where a wife and her child were awaiting the soldier's father's return.

"My wounded friend then told me his story. It was modestly told, and much of it in answer to my inquiries—a story of a machine gun kept in action amidst a terrible rain of shrapnel, of men being around the gun dead, and my friend sticking to his post, with dead comrades and German shells for company; sticking to it until it was a sheer impossibility to do so longer. "But they didn't get the gun," he concluded triumphantly. "I checked it in the river!"

"Well," he admitted, "they recommended me I hear for the Victoria Cross. Perhaps they'll make me a King's or a baronet, or something like that, extra pension, you know. Not to sneeze at eh?"

Two bob a day. To Private—of the —, that represented, in his modesty, a fitting reward for "anything he might have done."
Call Boyates "Rosalie."

A French infantry corporal described to an English journalist a bayonet charge in which he had taken part. He ended: "Ah, monsieur. I can swear to you that Rosalie has worked hard. Rosalie—ah, you do not know Rosalie—the bayonet."

"A battalion of Zouaves coming back from the charge filed past us. The setting sun fell on their bayonets, which were covered with blood, and turned them to a rose color. Now we call the bayonet 'Rosalie.'"

Pat Tells on His Mates.

From a fighting Irishman we find that the Englishman at the front worries most about the food, while the Scotch and Irish are irritated that the enemy does not come out where he is ready killed. A private of the Royal Irish Fusiliers had this to say: "What like is it at the front? Well, now it's hard to tell you that, unless you've been there; but, faith, I'll make a good try, just to oblige you. It's different, different from what goes on at home. The day's made up of groaning and fighting, except that instead of fighting among ourselves it's the Germans we fight. Maybe the Germans are a bit different, too; to what I'd expect. They come out and fight so we can give them the cold iron."

"The English don't seem to mind that so much, so long as they have full stomachs and can keep firing away at the Germans with the big guns and the rifles."

THE OUTLOOK IN CANADA

Handicap For Some Industries—Increased Activity For Others
Truly, it is an ill-wind that blows nobody good. One Continent's "down" is another Continent's "up."

The industries of Europe are, generally speaking, at a standstill, and matters will be worse before they can be better. The whole world is looking to the North American Continent—to Canada, and the United States—for much of its provisions, machinery, textiles, boots and shoes, beverages, vehicles, cement, brick, earthenware, fancy goods, furs, glass, garments, paper, soap, tobacco, wood products, and much else. Canada must get ready to meet the demand made upon her. We have continued prosperity ahead of us if our manufacturers and merchants rise quickly to take advantage of their opportunity.

RUSSIA'S IRON DUKE

Czar's Cousin-in-Chief Interested in Nothing But Military Affairs

The Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaievitch is commander-in-chief of the victorious Russian armies not by right of his consanguinity to the Czar, but because he has demonstrated that he is the one man in Russia for the post. Nicholas, the Iron Duke, stands some inches over six feet in his stocking feet. He is splendidly proportioned for his height, his eye is cold and stern, his features aquiline. His father, also a Grand Duke Nicholas, was the brother of Czar Alexander First—the czar who has gone into history as the man who freed the serfs and was later assassinated by the nihilists. Nicholas, czar of Russia, is the son of Alexander II. So the two Russian forces is only ten years older than his relative called the Great White Czar.

In Russia's war with Turkey in 1877 the grand duke's father and his uncle, Grand Duke Michael, both distinguished themselves and were both made field marshals—a very unusual title in the Russian army. Nicholas Nikolaievitch is very likely to be made a field marshal on his own account and so maintain the family tradition. Today the grand duke has no interest in anything unrelated to military affairs. Since 1900 he has given his entire time to the rehabilitation of Russian military prestige. He often sleeps in the war office at Petrograd. He has a narrow iron bed in his office there—a bed which, like his chair and his desk, has to be made to order because of his extraordinary height and size.

COMB SAGE TEA IN LIFELESS, GRAY HAIR

If Mixed With Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application for two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.
