Capt., Adjt. BIG COMET COMING. It Appeared in 1456 and Spread Terro

all Over Europe.

The famous comet known as Hajley's, which terrified Europe in 1846, will, next spring, pass close enough to the earth to be seen in all its glory. At the present moment the earth and the comet are rushing towards one another at a tremendous pace in their several orbits, and rapidly reducing the four hundred millions of miles which separated them a short time ago. There is, however, no danger of a collision, as we shall pass in October the spot at which the comet will arrive at the end of next March. By May and June next year we shall have got around to the other side of the sun, and the comet, which will them be turning in its path into space, will be at its nearest to us. But again we shall be in front of it, and when it crosses our orbit for the second time we shall be stardily leaving it behind us. Its last appearance was in 1835, for it has a period of about 75 years. Hailey's Comet was so called not because he discovered it, for it had long been known, but because he was the first to calculate its orbit and predict its return. Hailey was born in 1656, and was educated at St. Paul's School and Queen's College.

omer, travelled much on the Continent, and was a friend of Sir Isaac Newton. In 1720 he was made Astonomer Royal, and besides predicting the return of the comet in 1682, he recommended the use of the transit of Fenus for obtaining the paralax of the sun. He died in 1742 with a Newton. In 1720 he was made Astronmer. The comet, which bears his name has appeared since his death, in 1759 and 1835.

The two most celebrated historical appearances of Hailey's Comet were in 1066 and 1456. The first date was that of the Norman invasion of England, and each side claimed the comet as a portent in favor of themselves. The Normans said the comet was set in the heavens to guide Duke William across the Channel. The other famous appearance of the comet was in 1456, when it spread terror all over Europe, and in all the churches people prayed to be delivered from the Turks and the comet. Three years earlier Constantine, the last Emperor of Byzantium, had died the death of a hero on the Sandjakdar Yokushar, the Sultan Mohammed had entered the city and the Church of Sophia had become a mosque. The Crusades were over, and Christianity seemed fated to succumb to Islam, for nothing was able to stop the conquering Moslems. Then in 1456 the comet appeared in the heavens and Europe saw in it the scimitar of Othman foretelling the subjugation of Christendom.

Othman foretelling the subjugation of Christendom.

Its appearance according to the chroniclers of the time was terrible; it stretched across the sky like a waving flame and was of the color of molten gold. The Pope, Calixtus III., ordered that the bells in the churches should be rung every day at noon and that universal prayer should be offered up to exercise the portent and to check the advance of the Turks. Then at last, to the great relief of Europe, the fiery yataghen grew dimmer and fainter, and at last disappeared from the heavens. When next it appeared, in ISM, Solyman I. had just been repulsed at Vienna, and Europe had become accustomed to looking on Austria and Hungary as the barrier against the Turks and so comparatively little notice was taken of the comet as a Mohammedan portent.

Worth Knowing. I had the misfortune to spill ink on the front of a handsome double-faced walking skirt. I sponged the spots immediately with cold water, then with sweet milk, changing the milk and the rag in sponging as often as they became discolored, and kept this up until the rag showed no further discoloration. As soon as the skirt was dry I sponged it thoroughly with gasoline, and not a vestige of the ink remained. Soak the worst soiled sponge in sweet milk and it will come out sweet and clean. I usually rinse mine afterward in water coataning a few drops of carbolic acid.

A intile soap rubited on the botthat of a squeaking door, or on the sill, will sometimes remedy the trouble. If the difficulty lie in the hinges, dip a feather in kerosene and apply, swinging the door to and fro gently.

A hirde housekeeper dented a tiny V at the top of the wire carpet beater and used it to slip under picture wires to lift them: from the wall.
