" Common salt, which has long had a reputation with many farmers for its value as a fertilizer for barley, whil others disbelieved in its efficacy, has been shown to be a most valuable agen for producing an increased crop of that grain, while it is of much less use when applied to crops of spring wheat of oats."

An unmanured plot at the Experi mental farm, gave an average yield of 13 bushels and 43 lbs. per acre. A similar plot which has received only a dressing of 300 lbs. of salt per year gave an average yield of 27 bushels and 26 lbs per acre, for the past twelve years. Mr. Thompson delivered an address
