War Tactics Employed by Fleet in Recent Practice.

Washington, Aug. 13. (A.P.)—How the United States fleet, comprising three score naval craft, appeared on the face of the sea, under the effort of searchlight beams, over and upon the water, is told in an official Navy document, a critique of the Panama maneuvers.

The document reveals the possibility of the States being drawn into a war, both the Army and Navy staffs are proceeding on the assumption that hostilities would begin with a declaration of war and the first signalled by a terrific American soil.

The successful masking of the fleet by the enemy force in the war was declared by the judges to be a most outstanding tactical feature.

Under the conditions approximating those of war might be observed, the Department assumed that a crisis had arisen with an American power—denoted as "Black"—scattered at home ports for the attacking fleet, on the coast of the United States, was called upon to actually reach the 100 miles before reaching its destination in order that the same difficulties might be experienced as those from northern ports that were carried out the role of having suddenly mobilized for operations.

One squadron of destroyers had only 50 per cent of the orders came. The crews were hastily made up of volunteers. Eighteen destroyers were sent from Hampton under their own power to arrive within a few hours at the arrival were on the scouting.

Under the logical estimates of the fleet can be made," the officer said, "certain assumptions made as to the general situation which is supposed to exist, are as follows:

Relations between Blue and Black have recently been made by a cruise of the Black in the Eastern Pacific under the command of seven battalions, nine submarines and two destroyers, nine submarines and marine tender. After visiting the west coast of South America, the fleet assembled at Galapagos, where they joined the Base Force and Train and the fuel and cargo vessels. After repair and the entire Black fleet sailed for the announced intention of the Galapagos Bay and American waters.

Blue government, in view of the strained situation, has ordered the assembly of ships of the Blue Atlantic Coast yards for over the remainder has passed the Canal and is based on the under Admiral M., comprising 25 destroyers, 16 battle ships, three tenders. The army air canal force has been in the Canal Zone. This is the so-called "general situation."

View of the strained relations between Blue and Black, the commander of the Black fleet is leaving Black country, instructions that the general would call for the destruction of the Canal locks or other of the waterway.

This act, if incidental to seizure within radius of the Canal, would be to violate the neutrality of a Central or South American country, he was authorized to do so. He was also informed that the plane carriers would join a rendezvous to the north of the Galapagos Islands.

February 19 the Black plane carrier Admiral E's command left at 10 a.m. on that day when in 40 min. west, he received the Black General Staff.

Under the four war mission period will be no formal declaration of war.

It was concluded that Black's most serious intention would be to establish a base on the Central or possibly American Coast, and to launch an attack by bombers on the Canal. Black commander came to the conclusion. He rejected the American coast on account of the distance. After due consideration, Port Culebra, in Costa Rica, was chosen for the Black base.

Can Rebuke for Women.

There was an extraordinary scene in the National states a Central News from Rome, when a deputa-tion of 200 women were waiting to be received by the Pope. The women noticed that the Pope had all the women were covered, some had dresses with long necks and short arms. He rebuked them out and for them to enter, despite their indignation.
