CHAPTER XLVI.

When Wil Hamilton, in all the strength of his young manhood, started out with Major Powell's expedition, he was full of enthusiasm over his anticipated adventures.

Not a thought of danger or a suspicion of the terrible ordeal which lay before him entered his mind or cast a shadow over the bright hopes which animated him.

He believed that the experiences which were to come would be of inestimable value to him in his future career, and to be permitted to make one of the great explorer's company was an honor which he could not forego.

His voyage from Glasgow to New York was delightful, for the weather was all to be desired, and he found many a pleasant companion de voyage.

He proceeded to Chicago, where the major and the remainder of the expedition were awaiting him, and they started out at once for the unexplored region of the Colorado.

All went well until their fatal evening, just as the sun was going down, the party passed along the brow of a precipice toward an open space a little beyond, which they had seen with their glasses, and which they had fixed upon as their halting-place for the night.

No one thought of any special danger—they had been in many places even more perilous than that, and not a fear for their safety had disturbed them—and no one dreamed of the fearful calamity about to overtake one of their number.

Will had dismounted from his pony and was leading it along the narrow path, having more care for the animal than for himself.

He never knew how it happened that he came to be so near the edge of the precipice, nor how he could have become so heedless; but he suddenly stepped upon a rolling stone, lost his hold upon the bridle of his horse, fell himself plunging down the steep, frightful velocity through the deepening gloom, and knew no more until long afterward he awoke to find himself in a strange place, and surrounded by strange, wild faces.

He learned afterward that his fearful fall had been broken midway by a tree which grew almost at right angles out of the rocks, and whose dense foliage had probably been the means of saving his life.

For one terrible moment he had hung suspended among its branches, then his form had slipped from among them and dropped into the chasm below.

Two Indians were lurking there among the branches and boughs which grew thick and green.

They had been waiting the explorer party all day, whether from motives of plunder or curiosity was never ascertained, but they had known of a path which wound round the base of the precipice, and an easier and less dangerous one—and thus it was that day they were hiding there at the moment he shot over the summit, and they made no sound, no effort to save him. They saw him as he hung so helplessly among the branches of that tree, and were as motionless as statues until, in less time than it could possibly be told, he dropped limp and senseless among the branches at their feet.

When they bent forward, expecting to find him dead. But there were signs of life about the unfortunate man, though he was badly scratched and bruised, and without doubt, very seriously, if not fatally injured.

A few swift gestures, a few brief sentences, spoken with Indian caution, and they stooped, gathered up the helpless captive and bore him swiftly and noiselessly from the spot.

His hat had fallen almost where he lay; a little farther on, and it would have been lost. He was in the lower side-pocket of his coat, caught upon some bushes as they bore him away, and these two articles were all that remained to tell the story of his awful plunge, thus giving rise to the conjecture that some wild animal had dragged him to its lair and there devoured him.

The path at the base of the precipice was a winding one, and the Indians, with their burden, had long been out of sight when the horrified party above recovered themselves sufficiently to seek for their comrade.

They could see nothing from the brow of the precipice, for daylight was fast departing and everything in those mysterious depths was shrouded in gloom.

But once aroused to a sense of their duty, they made their way with all possible dispatch down the other side of the mountain and forced their way into the canon to search for Wil's body. They had no hope that they should find him living, but they hoped at least to find his remains and give them Christian burial.

They found the spot where he had fallen among the bushes and boughs, for they were broken and displaced, and there were marks about him. His hat was found, and at some distance from it, as they searched with blanched and anxious faces, they picked up his handkerchief, but the body of their comrade had most mysteriously disappeared.

In that wilderness, where they supposed there was not a human being besides themselves, it was but natural that they should arrive at the conclusion which they did, and after a long and fruitless search for the lair of the supposed depredator, they were obliged to leave the place, though it was with sorrowful faces and heavy hearts that they did so.

But less than five miles away there was an Indian camp, and thither poor Wil was borne as rapidly as the roughness of the ground and the state of his helplessness would permit.

Great astonishment and curiosity were manifested by the tribe when their scouts returned, not laden with deer and game, as they had expected, but bearing instead a human body, and that of a paleface.

The "medicine-man" was immediately called to attend to him; an examination was made into the white man's injuries, and an arm and leg were found to be broken, while his body was badly bruised, and it was feared that there might be internal injuries which would prove fatal.

He was taken to a wigwag, where his broken bones were not unskillfully set, and bandaged, and his bruised body anointed with some compound known only to those rude people; and then he was laid upon a comfortable couch of skins, a watcher was placed beside him, and then nothing more could be done for him but to wait until consciousness should resume its sway, or death should extinguish the spark of life which still remained in him.

DR. SHOOP'S RHEUMATIC CURE

Costs Nothing if It Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer. For years I searched everywhere to find a specific for Rheumatism. For nearly 20 years I worked to this end. At last, in Germany, my search was rewarded. I found a costly chemical that did not disappoint me as other Rheumatic prescriptions had disappointed physicians everywhere.

I do not mean that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure can turn bony joints into flesh again. That is impossible. But it will drive from the blood the poison that causes pain, and then the Rheumatic Cure is the end of Rheumatism. I know this so well that I will furnish for a month my Rheumatic Cure on trial. I cannot cure all cases within a month, but I would be unreasonable to expect that. But most cases will yield within 30 days. This trial treatment will convince you that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure is a power against Rheumatism—a potent force against disease that is irresistible.

My offer is made to convince you of my faith. My faith is not the outcome of experience—of actual knowledge. I know what I can do. And I know this so well that I will furnish a month's trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism. I will then arrange with a druggist in your vicinity so that you can secure a bottle of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure to make the test. You may take it a full month on trial. If it fails, the cost to you is $5.00. If it fails, the cost to me is $5.00. I will refund it. It will be left entirely with you. I mean that exactly.

If you say the trial is not satisfactory I will refund you a penny for the medicine. I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, for it is dangerous to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood. My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met, and in all of my experience, in all of my 2,000 tests, I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the book. Try my remedy for a month, for it will cure you anyway. If it fails the loss is mine.

SOME PRISONS have periodic attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed, no further trouble will be experienced.

A REQUISITE FOR THE RANCHER. The cattle ranges of the west, where men and stock are far from doctors and apothecaries, Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is kept in the rancher's house as a ready-made medicine, not only for many human ills, but as a horse and cattle medicine, and will find matters greatly simplified by using this Oil.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR THE SEASON

The Seventh Regiment will not this season be behind what it has been in the past in the way of athletics. The outlook at the present time, which, of course, is somewhat early to make predictions, is favorable. Those who answered the call last night for the semi-annual meeting of the Seventh Regiment Athletic Association were enthusiastic in their opinions as to what could be accomplished if they got down to work—and there is no doubt but that they will do so. Sgt. Major William presided at the meeting.

Immediate steps will be taken to see what changes there are of getting together an association football team. It is possible to secure enough men who can spare the time in the days of the week to back them. Today and tomorrow some hustling will be done by the interested ones, and tomorrow night the first meeting will be held of players. The practice will be called at the drill shed first, and arrangements will be made, probably, for the future practices. At any rate a definite idea will be had as to whether the association can go on with the game or not. The members last night seemed to think that it was quite possible.

Another matter that was decided upon was the entry of a whistle team in the city league. Those interested in the game will take the matter up at 8.00 p.m. and get the members together.

An important feature of the meeting was the discussion on hockey. It was agreed that a good team should be entered this winter and no efforts will be spared to make it a success. Col. Sgt. Chapman, Sgt. Hark and Pte. Skilton were chosen as representatives to the city league. The team will be made up as soon as possible, and just as soon as the weather permits the practice will begin. The Seventh is going to lose no time, but will hustle to win out in the city league. If the intentions of those present last night count for anything, the Seventh will be a force to be reckoned with.

The question of having an indoor baseball game was not considered, it being thought best to discuss the matter on the occasion of a more extensive meeting, and it was concluded to hold an adjourned meeting after the first regimental drill, when officers will be elected and committees appointed.

taking up the votes for public buildings. The rapidly with which the votes went through showed that there was a decided desire on both sides of the House to expedite business. The votes for $57,900 for Nova Scotia, and $14,500 for Prince Edward Island, and $40,100 for New Brunswick—in all $122,500—were passed before one o'clock, the vote for Quebec, public buildings being called first before rising for recess.

In answer to Mr. Clarke, Sir Frederick Borden stated in connection with the vote for the new storehouse at the Quebec military buildings that the estimates in it added votes for magazines at Toronto, Winnipeg, and London.

Col. Hughes insisted that there should be more arsenals and that they be inland.

The item was under discussion at 1 o'clock.

The House of Commons spent the afternoon discussing the supplementary estimates. The items put through related to public buildings in the Province of Quebec.

Items aggregating $1,661,397 for public buildings in the various provinces were passed by the House, during the day. The amount is divided as follows: Nova Scotia, $57,900; Prince Edward Island, $14,500; New Brunswick, $40,100; Quebec, $122,500; Ontario, $178,137; Manitoba, $121,600; Northwest Territories, $75,000; British Columbia, $122,830; Yukon Territory, $5,000; public buildings generally, $40,500; rent, repairs, furniture, heating, $51,500. A large number of items are for new post offices. Among other important items is one for $20,000, to make a beginning on a new barracks at Montreal to accommodate the 200 men who are to be added to the permanent military force of the Dominion.
