

FRY'S COCOA

"Leave some for me"

One Million Francs

By Arnold Fredericks

"My first attempt was naturally to make a demand upon the Count for money. Miss Elliott had written to her relatives that the amount left her by her aunt was two hundred thousand dollars. I knew, when I wrote the letter to D'Este, requesting the money, that he would not, of course, give it to me; what I hoped to do was to irritate him to such a point that he would call upon the police for assistance. It was over a month before he became sufficiently exasperated to do this. I, of course, learned of his every move through a young woman, the maid Gabrielle, whom I had introduced into his house as a servant. I dealt with this woman, however, only as Girdard—he did not know me as Girdard, hence, in order to get her assistance in the latter capacity, I was obliged to terrify her by informing her that I knew all about her connection with Girdard.

"I learned from her the morning of my first visit to the Count D'Este's house that the latter had determined to call in the police, and at once went to him as Girdard, and told him, as you know, to place the money in the library that night. In spite of my threats, I felt sure that he would not do as I asked unless he were urged to do so by the police, and this, as you will remember, was what I recommended.

"But, you said the Prefect, evidently much surprised, 'you left the house as Girdard and almost immediately returned and joined us in the library as Duvall. How did you accomplish this?'

"Simply enough. I walked into the hall as Girdard, after I had locked you and the Count into the library, and passed into the vestibule at the front door. As I did so, I removed the long overcoat which I wore, and hung it with a number of other coats upon a rack near the entrance. It remained there during your search of the house, quite unnoticed. My soft black hat I had thrust into one of my pockets. As soon as I got into the vestibule I removed my wig and beard, placed them in a pocket of my coat and took out the Panama hat, in which I immediately reappeared as Duvall. This Panama hat is a very fine one, and so thin and pliable that it may easily be passed through a finger ring. I was sorry to be obliged to sacrifice it last night," said Girdard, laughing, "and I trust that your men recovered it."

"It was the only vestige of you that we were able to find," remarked the Prefect, smiling. The humor of the whole affair was beginning to get the better of him. "Verrier has the hat in safe keeping downstairs."

"Good!" Duvall went on with his story. "As soon as you had been released from the library by the Count's butler, and had entered the hall, I pounded on the windows of the front door, and you will remember you admitted me at once. Naturally your men on guard at the door saw no one leave the house, and it is equally apparent to you why your sub-afraid that we shall also need Victor Girdard.

"I have not a doubt of it, Monsieur, and that is one of the reasons why I did not wish these people to penetrate the secret of my disguise. I promise you that I will remain in Paris, not only for the purpose of assisting in the prosecution of Monsieur D'Este, but also to take such steps as may be necessary to enable this young lady to recover her fortune. I realize that although the one million francs is safely in your hands, it will require legal action before it can be turned over to Miss Elliott."

NO GERMAN PERIL, SAYS SIR WILFRID

Glad That Canada Is Not in the Mad Race for Armaments.

LAWLEY SEES A MENACE

Fears Great Britain May at Any Moment Be Involved in a Struggle.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—A species of symposium on naval defence of the Empire took place at luncheon at the Chateau Laurier today. Sir Wilfrid Laurier making his first utterance on the subject since the end of the session, and Sir Arthur Lawley, former Lieutenant-Governor of Madras, and Arthur Grenfell, chairman of the Canadian Agency, speaking from the British standpoint. The occasion was the visit to Ottawa of the party of financiers and legislators which the Canadian Agency is taking to Western Canada.

Arthur Grenfell, who presided, in his speech uttered a word of warning to Canadian municipalities, saying that in the past they had been somewhat spoiled in the British money market, and had been given rather better terms than the market absolutely warranted. He advised them not to have recourse to short-term loans, but to accept the market price for there was not much money to be obtained at less than a year's term.

The political situation in Europe was the German found herself very strong, and was anxious to find a place in the sun. The century ago had that the British of the party of financiers and legislators which the Canadian Agency is taking to Western Canada.

Never Think of War. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, after some general observations, said that at Great Britain they were always thinking of war, and "in this country we never think of war." Canada had only one neighbor, and with that neighbor she had had no war.

Mr. Grenfell had alluded to years ago. Mr. Grenfell had alluded to years ago. Mr. Grenfell had alluded to years ago. Mr. Grenfell had alluded to years ago.

He agreed with Hon. F. D. Monk who had spoken briefly of Canada who would never fail to do her duty, but went on to say that the British Empire was composed of different nations and the problems of these nations were different. You must spend half time revenue upon them; we think of railways and canals. He did not believe that England could be done for or shall we continue to settle our affairs by arbitration? That is a problem we won't settle here.

Europe an Armed Camp. Sir Arthur Lawley, who was the last speaker, after some complimentary references to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, said that Europe was one vast armed camp. Germany was the first military power of the world; she was straining every nerve to increase her efficiency as a fighting machine; she was doing all this with no visible purpose. Viewing these circumstances, Sir Arthur Lawley said:

"In spite of what has been said this afternoon, I find at any moment England may be embroiled in a struggle of colossal magnitude, in which her very existence is at stake. A continental war, whatever the duration, whatever the issue, would have a paralyzing effect on Canada."

After a reference to the Asiatic danger, he said: "After the manner of our position in this district is not very reassuring as a result of the incessant rains. Farmers are unable to get in their crops, and in some places they are growing badly. During the heavy electrical storm Wm. Grey, of East Williams, had three fine cows killed by lightning, and a bolt killed a pig on the farm of Mr. Nagan, of East Williams."

Messrs. Sam Watson and Percy Graham, of East Williams, have left for the West to work in the harvest fields. Jessie Roberts, of Detroit, who has been visiting with Donald Johnson, of East Williams, returned to Detroit recently.

Misses Katie and Mary Morrison, of Detroit, are visiting with their father, Mr. Archie Morrison, of Centre road.

Mrs. Bob Otis and family, of Detroit, are visiting at John Morrison's, Centre road.

Peter McGregor, of McGillivray, has purchased the 100-acre farm of James McGregor, of West Williams, for $4,900.

Mrs. Patrick Ferguson and Mrs. Angus Morrison, of Centre road, left recently to visit friends in Sheriden County, Mich.

They were accompanied by Mrs. Donald McKinnon, of Mill street, Parkhill.

Donald Johnson, of Montana, formerly of the Centre road, and family are visiting with his brother, Angus Johnson, of West Williams.

DEADLOCK OVER BURIAL
Montreal and St. Lambert at Odds Over Debauch Victims.
[Canadian Press.]
Montreal, Aug. 27.—While ten of the eleven Russians, who died in a wood-alcohol debauch, lie in a morgue in a gruesome room, the city of Montreal and St. Lambert is already at a deadlock over their burial. It is stated that the coroner in certain of the city has been refused at the city hall, and there the matter stands.

Coroner MacMahon communicated with Dr. Laberge, city health officer, threatened to have the bodies buried and settle the bill as directed afterward, but he especially insisted that quick action was necessary. As they died in Montreal, the municipality of St. Lambert declines to stand for the expense of burial, although the men were working there.
