came out, which caused a break about 1½¢ during the first hour. Then the market ran into some good buying on orders from the seaboard, which looked like export business, and caused prices to react to the high point of the day, when October touched $1.25.

away, and prices sank to new lows, and the buying against "puts" was only thing that saved the market for a drastic break. At the close, wheat was weak and around the low of the day, October was 3½c lower, December 23½c, and March 15c down.

At times the market was fairly active, but the trade volume was large. The undertone was showing decided weakness, and some traders believe the decline may reach 10c before the market becomes stabilized.

The coarse grains fluctuated more or less in sympathy with wheat, but corn and barley, after declining to 1c, came back strong, and held to fractionally lower at the close.

fed. Liquidation in flax caused loss of 1 lb. to 2 lbs., while rye sustains 1 lb. to 2 lbs. more.

Both cash wheat and cash corn are extremely quiet today, and trade is confined to carlot transactions.
