Blood Poisoning in the Last Stages of Diabetes Cured for the First Time in the Case of Dr. E. A. Rose -Dodd's Kidney Pills Did It.

Toronto, Dec. 25, 1893.—The case of Dr. A. Rose, who was cured of diabetes by Dodd's Kidney Pills, was sufficiently remarkable to command widespread attention; but second thoughts bring out a more remarkable phase of the matter. Blood poisoning as a development of diabeter is Dodd's Kidney Pills, was sufficiently repoisoning, as a development of diabetes, is enced. always considered fatal. When it sets in, the attending physician always gives up any lingering hope he may have had. In Dr. Rose's case blood poisoning had set in, yet he was cured. His is the only instance of a cure having been effected after blood poisoning had appeared. This fact, and the reports of other cures of kidney disease resulting from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, must convince every one that these possess extraordinary virtues in cases of kidney and blood disorders.
