If this theory is correct, we should expect to find the greatest longevity among those animals and those men who subsist upon the simplest and purest diet, other conditions being equal. It would be impossible to find a sharper contrast than that which exists in this respect between carnivorous and vege-tarian animals. Contrast, for example, the dog, which grows old, becomes rheumatic and infirm in eight or ten years, with the donkey, which lives a useful life to 40 or 50 years, and the elephant, which is still active and useful at 100 years.

The same is true among men. The greatest number of persons now alive above 100 years are to be found among above 100 years are to be found among the Russian peasants, who rarely taste meat.
