The Marriage of the Princess Louise of Wales to the Earl of Fite.

CELEBRATED WITH CREAT POMP.

An Enthusiastic Reception Creets the Bridal Party all Along the Route-A valuable and Beautiful Collection of Wedding

LONDON, July 27 -Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise Victoria Alexandra Dagmar, eldest daughter of the Prince of Wales, was married at noon to-day to Alexander William George, earl of Fife, Kuight of the Thistie. The weather was unpropitious, as rain was falling. The ceremony took place in the private chapel of Backingham palace. This was the first marriage that ever took place in the chapel, which is small, and the number of guests was, therefore, limited. The bride and groom arrived privately. The Princess of Wales, the Crown Prince of Danmark, the King of Greece, Prince Albert Victor and Prince George of Wales assembled in the Bow library of Buckingham palace, a: 11.45 o'clock, and there awaited the arrival of the Queen from her private apartments.

The bidal party, consisting of the Prince of Wales, Princess Louise, and Princesses Victoria and Maud of Wales, left Marlborough house, the residence of the Prince of Wales, at 1140 o'clock for Buckingham palace. Nothwithstanding the rain the route to the palace was urowded with spectators. There was a vast concourse of people opposite the palace. The Prince of Wales was enthusiastically cheered. On the arrival in the Rew library of the Queen, who was accompanied by the Grand Duke of Hesse, the procession to the chapel was formed. It com-prised the Queen, the members of the royal family who had gathered in the library, the King of Greece, the Crown Prince of Denwho had found it impossible to enter the chapel, were seated. Upon reaching the chapel the Queen was escorted to the seat prepared for her, while the other Royal personages took seats on the other side of the

The Earl of Fife, who was attired in Highland costume and were the garter of the Duffs, accompanied by his groomsman, Mr. Horace Farquhar, took his position at the altar rails and awaited the coming of his bride. The Princess of Wales with the bride and Princesses Victoria and Maud of Wales and members of the household arrived at the palace just before noon. They were received by the Lord Steward and conducted to the Bow library, where the bride was joined by the bridesmalds, who were Princesses Victoria and Maud of Wales, Princess Louise of Schleswig-Holstein, Princess Victoria of Schleawig-Holstein, Princess Victoria of Teck, Opentess Feedere Gleichen, Countess Victoris Gleichen and Counters Helens Gleichen.

The bridal party then proceeded to the chapel. The bride wore a duchesse dress of white satin, with a flowing train. It was trimmed with orange blossoms. She also wore a wreath of crange blossoms and a point de gaza vell. The bridesmaids were dresses of blush plak fallie and carried bouquets of pink roses.

The clergymen officiating were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, the Dean of Windsor, domestic chaplain to the Queen; the Rev. F. A. J. Harvey domeatic chaplain to the Prince of Wales, and the Rev. T. Feignmouth Shore. The Prince of Wales gave away the bride.

A cheral service was sung by the choir of the Chapel Royal, St. James. Many of the ministers were present. Mr. Gladstone was also among the guests. The Queen wore a had quite as prominent a place as anything dress of black brocade. Her Majesty appear- else. Lord Fife's present to the Queen was a ed to be in excellent health and spirits. The diamond broach composed of the letters "L" Princess of Wales was attired in pearl gray and "F," with the royal crown and the Earl's satin brocaded with silver. Her royal high-ness also wore a tiars of diamonds. After the benediction had been pronounced the Queen kissed the bride and cordially greeted

After the wedding there were two breakfast parties in separate chambers in Buckingham place. One party consisted of the bride and groom, the Queen and other royal personages, and the other of guests. Toasts were given to the Queen and to the bride and

After the breakfast the Earl and his bride, the Princess of Wales and the bridesmaids returned to Mariborough house, the bride and bridegroom occupying the first carriage. Later in the afternoon the newly married couple departed for Sheen house, the suburban residence of the Earl of Fife, where a portion of the honeymoon is to be spent.

on arriving at Sheen house the newly married pair were enthusiastically welcomed. They passed betweed files of soldiers and under arches decorated with floral festoons. morning. The grand dining room presented a Witte sighs such as Marlborough house never saw be-fore and such as has barely been seen anywhere It was a spacious curiosity shop, a storehouse of bric-a brac and gems which at first quite dazzled the unprepared observer and left him for quite a time so nonplussed that a concrete study of a time so nonplussed that a concrete abudy of the valuable cilerings had so wait for the laterovery from a general effect that was rather stunuing. The larger gifts were massed at random about the room. They consisted of a Steinway grand plane from Lady Leicester, itsleid writing deaks, all kinds of screens in metal, embroidery, mirrors and gold ornaments, large gold and silver trays, shields, howls, cups, gold tea sets, gold vases, busts, oil paintings, fancy furniture, rugs, bronzes, flower stands and porceelain. celain,

They were passed over in a second, however, in favor of a long table running the length of the apartment, covered with the smaller and more precious gifts so thickly that the white cloth was scarcely to be seen. The left hand side of the table for half of its length blazed with diamonds and all the most precious stones. It was a confused mass of tiaras, necklaces, bracelets, pendants, brooches and earrings, representing the most valuable stones that the world's market could furnish. There were diamonds enough to comfortably equip a royal

A jeweller who was present, after a careful estimate of the entire display, estimated the gifts in precious stones alone at between £190,000 and £200,000. The first £50,000 of this was made by presents of Lord Fife, the Rothschilds and the Prince and Princess of Wales, while a large number of fancy stones, representing values, made the total estimate seem small rather than large.

Lord Fife's present to his bride consisted of a tiars and two necklaces. The tiars was a mass of diamonds, a line of large pear-shaped stones running around its entire front, hanging and shimmering in pear-abaped openings. About these at the top, was a line of diamond points, also consisting of pear-abaped diamonds. The inverted pendants were surrounded by beautiful fragile open work, fronted with diamonds, the whole being one of the most arbitic and valuable pieces in all England. The necklaces were together in the same casket. The larger of the two was a string of the purest diamonds, the smallest being the size of a pea and the largest along the front as large as a sixpence. The inner necklace was of smaller blue stones, diamonds so rare and so perfect that the necklace very probably vied with the larger one in

The tiara from the Prince and Princess of Wales was in narrow lance shaped beads of diamonds, striking from its simplicity and bril-liancy. It can be turned over, when it becomes pendant necklace. It is two inches deep in a penuanu neckiace. It is two inches deep in the centre, and is graduated off to a depth of half an inch on each side. The ornaments are pear-shaped alternately with little spikes con-taining smaller brilliants and the central ones contain nine stones, while the end ones contain only three, the whole is mounted on a row of single stones.

TWO WONDERFUL GEMS.

Two of the most rare and most valuable single stones in the collection were a large ruby, cut on cabochon, from the Duke and Duchess of Westminister, and a Burmese cat's eye, from Lord and Lady Rothschild. How many thousands of guineas each cost must have depended on the desire of the purchaser and the conscience of the seller, as neither would be difficult if not impossible to match. The ruby was set simply as a pendant, surrounded by diamonds, and the big cat's eye, which was luminous ball of yellowish green fire shining out most prominently among all the gems, was set as a cover to a watch in a watch breelet of solid diamonds. There was only one gift of pearls and only one of opals, the latter being a beautiful ring from Lady Cork.

The Empress Fraderick and her daughters sent a large bronze mantel ornament with a clock at one side. The Empress Eugenie sent a large gold card bowl of beautiful open work. Other gifts of the Prince and Princess of Wales comprised a travelling case of black grained Russian leather, with gold-topped bottles, goldhandled buttonhooks, scissors and all other minutiæ, and ivory brushes, all bearing the bride's monogram. The most valuable thimble that ever was seen, and admirably calculated to stand the wear and tear to which it is destined, was of gold, enamark and other guests and the officers of the melled in rosebuds and thistles, winh a large with water and throwing it on the fire, In to the chapel, passed through several royal anartments in which many of the guests.

Were dozens of fans, and they were incomparated were released her and then searched the preble gems of their kind. Three of them were of expanding snow white ostrich feathers from Lady Colville, Mrs. James and some one else

Other fans were antique with mother of pearl frames set in diamonds, from Lord and Lady Londesborngh, Captain and Lady Montsgu, Prince and Princess Christian, Lady Emily Dyke, Lord Carnarvon, Lord Nigel and Lady Kingscote, Lord and Ludy Brook and Lady Augusta Fane. Lord Tennyson sent his poem in eight small and handsome volumes, and Mr. Gladstone gave a set of "Gladstone Gleanings" in seven volumes.

THE EARL OF FIFE'S PRESENTS.

Lord Fife's presents were of a more substan tial character and occupied the other side of the table. From the Prince of Wales was a royal mantle ornament of solid silver on a royal mantle ornament of solid silver on a black marble base, representing a stag with two bounds leaping at his throat, being Landseer's last group. The Princess of Wales gave a large ministue portrait of herself set in pearls. His Lordship's tradesmen sent a silver salver. The citizens of Banff, a tall massive silver cup. Heary Irving's gitt was a massive and most artisue silver drinking cup in the shape of a kneeling Egyptian figure.

There were a number of gold cigarette cases and cigar cases set with diamonds, bowls, cups riding whips, coaching whips, rugs, travelling cases, &c., as elegant and expensive as such articles can be Lord Roseberry's gift was a handsome liqueur, set in crystal and gold, consisting of two bottles, twelve glasses and a tray of gold. Table ornaments, spoons, knives, salts and the like were scattered all over the table on both sides. The finest eight case probably that money could buy was from Lord Alfred Rotschild, in light grey leather, with two "f.'s," one in diamonds and the other in rubies, crossing each other, and a long ruby clasp on the other handle. With violet-like modesty there nestled among the pretentious gifts a little silver basket marked "The Garden at Sheen," and it coronet above.

Conversions in England.

The number of English people who come into the Church every year is not confined to those who are received at home. It would seem that very many English converts now go to the continents to make their abjuration. There is not a capital in Europe where an English-speaking community is to be found, where English converts do not repair for instruction and reception into the Church. Only last Sunday the agent of the Associated Press had the following about conversions of Englishmen in the French capital.

writes ; "The well-known church in the Avenue Hoche comes once more promiently under notice. I strolled in yesterday afternoon and found that a function of importance was about to take place. The church no longer presented its usual appearance, for on the right hand side of the church before the right hand side of the church before the high alter were a number of young ladies dressed in black wearing white veils, and on the lefts number of gentlemen. I inquired the meaning of this and was told they were all to be converts to the Church of Rome, who were awaiting the coming of His Eminence, the Cardinal Archbishop of Paris, Russell, emerged from Before him was borne the processional cross, while an acolyte held the vessel which, I was told, contained hely water. They were followed by the Fathers of the community, the Revs. Matthew Kelly, Osmand Cooks and Constantine O'Hare. On his arrival at the door of the church the Cardinal Archbishop was presented with hely water. He then entered the church and took his seat in the sanctuary with the reverend clergy. Then standing at the altar rails, he addressed those about to be confirmed in French in a short discourse. His Eminence explained the nature of the sacrament about to be conferred, and expressed the great satisfaction at seeing so many who, drawn by the light of falth, had joined the Catholic Church, He complimented the Fathers on their real for the spiritual welfare of the English-speaking part of his flock which he had intrusted to their care. It gave him great joy, he said, to be in their midst, and he felt sure the spirit of God, who was about to descend upon them, would enable them to stand firmly in their faith, which God in his mercy had singled them out from so many to nonor. He said that for hundreds and hundreds of years England had been Catholic. Their foreiathers had been robbed of their religion, and with the uprightness and honesty which characterized the English nation, when they found that the Catholic Church claimed their allegiance, they at once submitted in spite of the loss of friends, the loss of many things of temporal good, but a gain of all that is most precious—the true faith. The ceremony closed with the Benediction of the most Blessed Sacrament given by his Eminence."- Western Watchman.

A MIDNIGHT ESCAPADE.

A well-connected Kingstonian Strangely Turns Burglar and Comes Very Near Being a Murderer,

KINGSTON, July 25 .- Not many days have elapsed since the two young men, Biddle and Clark, were captured in Waldron's atore and cent to the penitentlary for five years, and now again the public is startled by another daring attempt at burglary and perhaps mur-Last night Mrs. Martin's house, on Wellington street, opposite the Post office, was broken into, birs. hiartin's servant girl was awakened by the noise of some one moving about and by the flashing of a dark lantern in her face. She acreamed for help and the man told her to keep quiet " or I'll kill you," at the same time placing a revolver to her head. He asked her if blre. Martin and Mrs. Horsey slept in the same room. But the girl, continuing to scream, the bur-glar produced skate straps and tied her limbs and gagged her mouth with a piece of bed-

AN EXCITING ENCOUNTER.

Mrs. Martin was awakened by the girl's screams, and, taking a lamp, proceeded down stairs. On reaching the drawing-room she saw the open window, and realizing that mischief was brewing, started back up-stairs. When she had ascended eight or nine steps the rebber rushed up and Mrs. Martin screamed for help. He said if she didn't stop screaming he'd shoot her. She promptly screamed again, when he almed his revolver and fired, the bullet luckly missing its mark. He then rushed up stairs and struck Mrs. Martin on the head three times with the butt end of the revolver, inflicting three pasty wounds, from which the blood flewed copiously. Mrs. Martin dropped the lamp, the burning oil from which set fire to the stair carpet, the broken lamp glass cutting her naked feet to the bone. Mrs. Martin rushed past the burglar out into the street. Her acreaming attracted the attention of officer Ballantyne, who rushed into the house and extinguished the flumes by filling his belimet with water and throwing it on the fire, In the basement he found the maid tied with mises. In the back yard he found a man's hat and a dark lantern. There was no other trace of the robber, except where he had entered through the drawing-room window.

THE TELL TALE HAT.

In the hat was the name "Marshall C. Twitchell," A visit was paid to the different hat sheps and it was finally identified by W. C. Wright, he having sold it to Marshell C. Twitchell some weeks ago. Twitchell was found in his uncle's office, on Ontario street. When the officers epened the door the yeung man trembled visibly. He was escorted to the police station where he admitted that he was the burglar. Friends were called in and they have taken the matter up. He was in a dazed state when arrested.;

A REMARKABLE STORY.

His story is that he went home yesterday auffering from a severe headache. He went to hed and remained elseping until eleven o'clock. Then he arose. This has been substantiated by others in the house. The next thing that he remembers was the firing of a revolver. This was in Mrs. Martin's house. He had no remembrance of entering the place, had never been in the house and knew none of the inmstes. After firing the shot he re-members fissing homeward. He says he never was addicted to drinking, smoking or any narcotics. He is unable to explain his conduct at all.

After the outcries of Mrs. Martin had aroused the neighbors the young man was among these who assembled and he sided young Mr. Holden in searching for the bur-He remembered fleelog from the house and also returning to it, This morning he was up bright and early and began reading. AN AMERICAN CONSUL'S NEPHEW.

Twitchell is a fine looking young fellow, a third year student of Queen's college, and nephew of United States Consul Twitchell, with whom he lives. He passed through the city public schools and collegiate institute, proving an apt and clever scholar. He was never knewn to do a dishonorable act.

It is thought that when the act was committed his mind was filled with stories of desperate deeds done by villains, the result of persistent novel reading. Much sympathy is felt for his friends. His trial will come

KINGSTON, July 26.-The Twitchell burgiary case came up before the police magis-trate this morning, but owing to Mrs. Martin's iliness an adjournment for one week was made. Young Twitchell, it appears, is the son of the United States Counsel Twitchell by his first wife, and not his nephew, as atated yesterday. Twitchell's dector says that about twelve months ago young Twitchell's mind was somewhat unhinged. For a considerable time he had a strong and nearly irresistible inclination to de something desperate, an inclination which was only overcome by the most strenuous exercise of will power. Twitchell to-day said that about a week age this same inclination to do something desperate came upon him. He fought it as the then recollects running across the Congregational church yard and striking his head against a tree. His memory then became blank sgain until he found himself in Martin's house with the searchers. He distinctly donies that he has been perusing dime novels and such trash, but says that his reading has always been of a good, sound kind, most of his time being spent studying history, one of the classes he would have taken in Queen's next session. At present he does not appear to realize the enormity of his orime. He is very weak and fainted twice in the cells yes terday afternoon. His medical attendants, Dr. Fenwick and the Hen. Dr. Sullivan, have given a certificate saying that he is very seriously ill and recommending his removal to the hospital. Such, however, has not been done. Young Twitchell is a member of the 14th P.W.O.R. and went with them on their recent trip to St. Catharines. Both officers and men, with whom he was intimate, speak in the highest terms of his gentlemanly conduct. They think that he has been doing too much study ing and that the overwork has affected his mind. Mrs. Martin's condition is yet serious, but it is thought she will come around all

GLADSTONE'S GOLDEN WED. DING.

The Grand Old Couple Receive the Congratulations of Innumerable Friends.

LONDON, July 25.—This was the golden wedding day of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone. The Queen telegraphed a congratulatory message to the distinguished couple, and the Prince and Princess of Wales and other membars of the royal family sent letters to them. The Prince of Wales also sent a gold inketand to Mr. Gladstone. A number of Liberal ladies presented a portrait of Mr. Gladetone with his grandson. The portrait was painted by Millais. A large number of other presents were received. Mr. Gladstone rose early and attended morning service. The family took breakfast together at the James street residence of Mr. Gladstone, There was an immense number of callers during the day, among them John Morley, Sir William Vernon Earcourt and the Earl of Aberdeen and other Liberal peers.

The portrait, by Millale, of Mr. Gladstone and his grandson, presented to the great Liberal leader this morning, is quite a surprise to everbody, as Millais only began work on it the first of the month. Notwithstanding the haste with which it had to be executed, good critics pronounce the work the best that the femous artist has ever done. In Hawarden, Mr. Gladstone's home, the church bells were kept ringing all day. The ex-Premier and his family will go to Hawarden next week, when the festivities here are over, and the celebration will be resumed among his neighbors there.

LONDON, July 26.—The National Liberal club was lavishly decorated this evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone, who yesterday celebrated their golden wedding. There were 2,000 persons present, including a large number of peers and members of Parliament and many ladies. Viscount Oxenbridge presented to Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone an album, the work of the leading artists com-memorative of the occasion. Mr. Gladstone, in accepting the gift, made an eloquent and pathetic speech, which was free from political references. He said he felt as if drowned in an ocean of kindness and he reciprocated their good will. He deemed it a noble calling to serve people such as they, and he hoped they would all partake of the full blessings belonging to them as Britions and Christians. Mr. and Mrs. Gladetone took their departure from the hall amid a scene of the greatest enthusiasm.

WHEAT .- Receipts for week, 111,230 bush. against 75,979 bushels for the week previous. In Manitoba wheat holders are asking higher figures than they can get, but when it comes to a question of actual business, much lower prices have to be accepted. For instance, a lot of several car loads of No. 2 hard was sold at $1.08 delivered here, which was the best figure that could be taken out of the market. Holders of large quantities however are asking more money, and we learn of a lot of No. 2 hard being offered at $1.10. We quote $1.08 to $1.10 in car lots, and No. 1 is quoted at $1.12 to $1.18. But holders of large quantities ask more money. Upper Canada wheat is quoted in the West at $1 to $1.06.

EGGS.—Receipts during the week were 624 pkgs, against 2,257 pkgs for the week previous. Since our last report the market has remained about as last quoted, namely, 134c to 14c for strictly choice candled atock, and 124c to 18c for less desirable goods. The great trouble in the egg market is that many poor eggs have been received lately, presumably the culls of western packers. The American market keeps very low, causing more western eggs to come to very low, causing more western eggs to come to this market than when western sbipments can be made to the New Eugland markets. A party from the country was in the city with a lot of eggs, and the best bid he could get was 12c up till noon, and he then talked of shipping them back again.

refined seal oil and prices are quoted at 440 to 45c, with an upward tendency. Newfoundland cod oil quiet at 37c to 39c and other grades at 34c to 36c. Cod liver oil 65c for Newfoundland, and 95c for Norway.

MONTREAL STOCK YARDS. The receipts of live stock for week ending July 27th, 1889, were as follows:— Oattle. Sheep. Hogs. Calves were large meeting, a fair trade, prices firm at from 420 to 430. The supply of butchers stock was short of the demand, the result being that prices "boomed" and the drovers were fortunate who had cattle for sale on Thursday's market, some good breves sold as high as 50 per lb. The sheep market is quiet, no change in prices, large receipts but mostly for export. Hogs quiet at receipts our mostly for export. Hogs quiet at 5% for the best. Slight advance in calves, falling off in receipts. We quote the following as being fair values:—Export, 4% to 4%; Butchers good, 4% to 4%; Butchers Med., 3% to 4%; Butchers Culls, So to 3%; Sheep, 4% to 4%; Hogs, 5% to 5%; Calves, 83.00 to 87.00.

2304 2456 Over from last week. 554 640 334 40

The receipts of horses at these stables for week ending July 27th were as follows:—177; left over from previous week, 20; total for week, 197; shipped during week, 182; left for city, 5; on hand for sale, 10—197. Arrivals of thoroughbred and other imported stock at these stables for week and shipped per G.T.R., ex S.S. Montreal, 48 horses consigned to Burgess Bros. of Wenona, Illinois. Ex S.S. Concordia, 22 horses consigned to Galbraith Bros. of Jamesville, Wisconsin; 19 horses consigned to C. Lawson, of Watertown, Wisconsin; 5 horses consigned to Watertown, Wisconsin; 5 horses consigned to W. Colquboun, of Mitchell, Ontario. Ex S.S. Grecian, 22 horses consigned to E. Miller of Ancona, Illinois. Trade at these stables during the week has been very dull, owing to the scar-city of sale horses, propects for next week more encourging.
