Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Smith: I would ask, Madam Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Taylor: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder if the cup of joy has run over the Hon. Member yet and if he has been able to get me an answer to question No. 2,329 which was tabled on April 2, 1981.

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, my enthusiasm is as buoyant as ever. I regret I cannot advise the Hon. Member that I have received an answer from the Minister but I did advise him of the concern of the Hon. Member and press him for an answer to that question.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

TRIBUTES TO PAGES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order that I am sure will be accepted by all Members of the House. I think most of us anticipate that this will be the last day of this particular semester of this session.

During the course of this session we have been served by a number of young people in the House of Commons who have performed duties well beyond what was necessarily required of them. They have served us well and cheerfully. They have put up with us in those times when we were less than courteous. They have seen the House of Commons operate at its best and at its worst. I think it is fair to say that they have been a group of young people who have well represented other young people in Canada, both before the public who came to the House to view its operations and before the television public all across the country.

Therefore, Madam Speaker—

—on behalf of all the Members of this House, we should thank the pages for their good work.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, on behalf of the Official Opposition, I should like to associate this Party with the remarks of the House Leader for the New Democratic Party. We thank the pages who are in the House and ask that they carry our thanks to their colleagues. We wish them the best of luck in their future endeavours.

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I want to join in the sentiments expressed by the House Leaders of the two Opposition Parties. Not only have these young people provided us with friendly, courteous service in the House, but in doing so they have had a unique opportunity to add to their education and their understanding of the operation of the parliamentary system beyond that which many people in the country attain.

I join my colleagues who have already spoken in congratulating them on their efforts, wishing them well in the coming summer and in the continuation of their studies and eventual careers.
