

grace.—In short, we would advise his Lordship, at this time of day, to abstain from an aukward imitation of others, to avoid all trite phrases, constrained attitudes, and worn-out expletives; for it is possible they might pass very well with Burke, Germain, Fox, Barré, or Ellis, and nevertheless appear amazingly nauseous and disgusting at second hand.

