And, although she "rather shocked, at the way in which sage lying on its side. Just beneath the balloon, running its full length, is a "sage lying on its side."

And chief among these were the boys of the vicarage, against whom, as studied attempts had failed. against their mother for her criticisms, and their father for his dull sermons, her spirit was always in arms. The strife between the Bonningtons and the Roses had not always been so keen. Indeed, in the old days, when they were children together, Mabin and Rudolph had got on well enough to- at a higher speed than usual. She was gether, and had exchanged love tokens well on her way back to Stone, when of ends of slate pencil, lumps of chalk and birds' eggs. But with advancing years had come first coolness and then estrangement, so that it was now the correct thing for the Bonnington boys to laugh at Mabin for being "advanced," "superior," "a new woman," and a "fright," while she, on her side, treated them with lofty contempt as "savages" and "boors." Mabin had not gone twenty yards, however, on her way up the slight ascent when she saw something which diverted her thoughts from the vicarage people. The gate at "The Towers" were wide open, and Mrs. Dale's smart victoria, with its well-matched pair of small, dark-brown horses, came out so suddenly that Mabin had to jump off her bicycle to avoid a collision. Alone in the carriage sat a lady in deep mourning, who turned and looked out anxiously at the girl, and stopped the carriage to speak to her. "I'm so sorry. I hope you didn't hurt yourself in having to jump off so quickly?" asked the lady in black, in sweet, plaintive voice that struck some chord in Mabin's heart, and made the girl gasped and paused before she could answer.

"Oh, no; oh, no, thank you. One often has to do that," stammered she, flushing, and speaking with a shy constraint which made her tone cold and almost rude. And she knew it, poor child, and was miserable over it; miserable to think that now, when she had the opportun-

One thing, however, Mabin was able to do. In the shy look with which she returned Mrs. Dale's kind gaze of inquiry, she took in a picture of a lovely woman, which remained impressed on her mind ineffaceably. Mrs. Dale was a lovely woman, lovelier than Mabin had thought when she only got glimpses of the lady's pro-file from her seat in church, or peeps at her through a thick black veil. Mrs. Dale wore a black veil today, but in the open carriage, in the full glare of the sun, her beauty was evident

The sun was beating down fiercely by this time upon the white, chalky roads, but Mabin rode on recklessly, turning her head to look along the road she had come by, she perceived that Rudolph was not far behind. She had forgiven his indescretion by this time, and rather hoped that he was following quickly on purpose to "make it up," so she went on her way through a group of straggling cottages at a rath-

There was a sharp bend in the road at this point, and just as she sounded her bell in turning the corner she saw Rudolph, who was now close behind, dismount and pick something up from the road. The next moment something struck the front wheel of her bicycle, and she and her machine were flung with violence down in the road. She had time to utter a cry, no more, before the cash came.

(To be continued.) In the olden days men were physically, at least, worthy of the admiration of 1 women. It is a great big something for a woman to feel that her husband is truly a capable and intrepid pro-tector. It is a com-fort for her to feel that he has the physical stamina and courage to defend her through tudes of life. Nowadays all the vicissi-

oral and a menstandpoint. He may be a moral and a mental giant, but the flesh of ill-health is weak, and he is probably a physical coward. It is not in nature for a sickly man to be a brave man. His spirit may be willing but his body is weak. That is the man's own fault. Any man can be healthy who will pay a little common sense attention to his health when he has it, and when he gets a little out of sorts, take the right remedy. Many of the diseases that afflict mankind are traceable directly to indigestion, torpidity of the liver and impurities in the blood.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the greatest medicine for disorders of this nature. It strengthens a weak stomach, corrects all disorders of the digestion, gives edge to the appetite, invigorates the liver, purifies and enriches the blood and tones up and invigorates the nerves. It searches out disease germs, kills them and carries at King Fisher, Okla. them out of the system. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and nerve-tonic and restorative. It makes strong, healthy men out of weak, sickly invalids. Medicine dealers sell it and no honest dealer will urge a substitute upon you.

"The medicine certainty worked like a charm on me, but when I first began to take it I felt a little worse for a few days; had pains through my body and bones, but all this left me after taking the medicines four or five days."

Constable Flath said that he had found in the prisoner's house an American bogus half-dollar piece, four 25-cent pieces, also dies for the coins. Millar was committed.

The mysterious disappearance from Duart village is chronicled of Alfred E. Beach, a young Englishman, who had been in the employment of Mr. Angus Thomson for the past year. He was seen going in the direction of Muirkirk, and beyond that no trace of him can be found. There is $50 due him, and he liked the place.

THIS QUEER YEAR.

The Numerical Combinations of '98 Excite Great Interest.

German statistical scientist calls attention to the remarkable attributes of the year 1898. No man in the present generation has lived, or will live under such peculiar circumstances, a condition that has not appeared since 1651, and will not appear again until the ♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦♦ year 2119. People imbued with a superstitious belief and members of thirteen clubs ought to watch closely the events of this remarkable year. As a starter, the numeral year 1898 can be divided by 13, and the four figures added together give 26, which can also be divided by 13. The numeral of the year 1898 also belongs to the remarkable group of four-sided numbers, of which only eight have existed since the birth of Christ, 1898 being the ninth. Take 1898, for instance. Subtract the first figure from the third, and the value of the second and fourth are received These peculiar year numbers have been 1010, 1121, 1232, 1343, 1454, 1565, 1676, 1787 and now 1898.
