Description of Victim. The murdered man was a pleasant-tooking fellow, without the sign of a beard on his round face. He could be identified by his peculiar, tho not un-sightly, nose, which had no bone from the bridge down and turned up to a sharp point. Over his right eye was a scar, the shape of an elongated pear, with the apex down and breaking into his light brown eyebrow. The mouth was open and a row of large clean teeth protruded. The skin has disteeth protruded. The skin has dis-colored hideously since Sunday. Had the tessel of the scarf not pro-truded from the leaves the body might

Why should the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific give a special suburban train service in and out of Montreal and deny the same to Toronto?

The board of railway commissioners are to be asked to investigate this discrimination.

These are the two main points raised in The World's battle for special suburban trains. Our commissioner is now out working up the facts. Give him or send in to The World your views. We must get all the facts. In the meantime here is some light-giving information on this 14.13

The tickets are computed, with a few exceptions, so the Grand Trunk officials state, on the basis of five return tickets for the price of five one-way tickets. The ten-block tickets are good for one year from the date of issue, except where the summer limitation as to time applies. This ticket is practically transferrable, as there is nothing on it to identify the purchaser.

The 55-ride ticket, however, is limited to one person and to one month from the date of issue. Commuters' tickets, it may be stated, cannot be purchased on the train.
