ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Ofive Roberts Barton

"Good evening," said the little fairy in the lotus flower.

When Johnny Jump Up and the Twins scrambled down the rose vine into the magic garden, the next night, a new flower had grown there.

It looked like a water lily—in the gold fish pool.

"It's a lotus flower," whispered Johnny Jump Up, "and the fairy who lives in it is an Egyptian fairy."

"Good evening," said the little fairy in the lotus flower. "I've been waiting for you. You are to go to Egypt tonight and it is a long distance away and there is so much to see, you had better be starting at once."

She handed three tickets to Johnny Jump Up, who thanked her very kindly.

Tommy Titmouse hopped up and punched the tickets with his bil.

Nancy and Nick and Johnny Jump Up. "Well, I've seen enough of Egypt," "Well, I've seen enough of Egypt, "Well, I've seen enough of Egypt, "Well, I've seen enough of Egypt, "Said Tommy. "Let's go home."

Tommy Titmouse settled down on a plam tree to rest.

Tommy Titmouse settled down on a plam tree to rest.

"My, it's hot!" said Nancy.

"Yes, Egypt is a warm country," said Johnny Jump Up. "While we are resting, I'll tell you a little about it. Soon we will come to a river. It is called the Nile and it is the longest river in the world. There is no water in Egypt except a ong the Nile River, so all the people live there. Egypt is thousands of miles long, but only a few miles wide. It is like a long ribbon."

Tommy Titmouse hopped up and punched the tickets with his bil.

The main provision is that which abolishes mixed trading, and requires that a drink shop shall sell nothing but drink, unless food is consumed with it on the premises when food may be sold. But food may not be sold across the counter as at present. The great proportion of country shops which sell drink, and there are 15,000 altogether in the Free State, are general stores and sell everything. In future they must abandon the sale of liquor and, according to the licensed trade, the necessary structural alterations would cost over $20,000,000.

The bill especially aims at the traffic in poteen. Until now offenders escaped with fines, and as the trade is highly profitable the fine was no deterrent and was really passed on to the thirsty customers. In future the penalty is to be imprisonment. The trade in ingredients is to be checked by the provision that any material capable of being distilled into poteen can only be obtained, even by those intending to Englishman Gives School Children at Home Benefit of Travels.

When the Canadian Pacific liner Montroyal docked at Quebec last voyage, says the Toronto Globe, she brought to Canada a veteran traveler who was completing his 129th trip across the Atlantic.

His name is Samuel P. Jagger, J. P., and as the English director of the House of Hobberlin, he has crossed to Toronto twice a year since 1886. At Henley, near Huddersfield, in the west riding of Yorkshire, he makes his home, and besides cutting a prominent figure in the woollen industry, occupies the position of county alderman in the riding. Mr. Jagger is interested in the advance of juvenile education, and utilizes his journeys for the benefit of Yorkshire school children. On his return to England he lectures on his experiences at various schools in the riding, and later the students are asked to write essays on what they have heard. Mr. Jagger gives prizes for the wescels.

The opinions of such a veteran should be worth noting; and when he says that he has given up coming by New York, and always takes the St. Lawrence route, the reason must be a good one. Mr. Jagger is an enthusiastic booster for the Canadian Pacific services. He remarks that he has recommended the Canadian ships to numerous friends. "I have found," he says, "that I get more comfort on the Canadian Pacific boats than on the huge liners entering New York on which the price is twice as great."

Since his first trip across the ocean some 38 years ago, he has traveled on 57 different vessels, spent over $20,000 on fares, and journeyed more than 1,000,000 miles. In all that time he has never met with a serious accident. Numerous sea captains have learned to welcome his cheery presence on their vessels.

Up with the Flag of Health

Sixty years old — four years older than Dominion Day itself — and up at sun-rise to hoist the flag. The lovable old gentleman's spirits are infectious, and every day more and more Canadians are getting to know the wonderful Kruschen feeling and gathering 'round Grandpa's banner of good health.

How do you feel these hot days? Are you tired, listless and used-up?

Just consider! Working indoors all day, you get little fresh air and hardly any exercise. This affects some people very vitally, and probably you are one of them. The liver and kidneys slow up and impurities creep into the blood. "The blues" soon follow. Your work becomes a burden.

Get that Kruschen feeling! "The blues" will travel faster than the wind—anywhere, away from you. Take your dally dimeful of Kruschen Salts in your breakfast cup of coffee or tea. You can't taste them if you take them this way, but they will do you a world of good. They tone up the liver and kidneys, so that these organs perform their functions as nature intended; actively, thoroughly, they cleanse the blood of all impurities. Fresh, clear blood circulates all over your body, bringing new life to every fibre of your system. Your mind is keener, you feel more active, your work feels like play. You finish the day fresh as paint.
