LLOYD-GEORGE WINS.

Whether the allegations made by eral Maurice in a letter to an Eng- dian Parliament is nearing its close ewspaper are or are not support. political gossips in the capital are commons, yesterday, by a vote of almost three to one, rejected the motion of ex-Premier Asquith that a select content of the angle of the content of the con vestigate the statements made by Gen-eral Maurice and in which Lloyd-was formed Mr. Crothers was slated George and Bonar Law were held to be by gossip-mongers for retirement, but designers Maurice charged that Lloyd George, the Premier of Great Britain and Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had been guilty of making statements in Parliament that were not true, but which were calculated to deceive and mislead the public.

Bonar Law was said to have declared that the question of the extension of the British front in France was not dealt with at the Versailles conference, while the charge against Lloyd-George was that he misrepresented the size and power of the British army in France and that his statement that the army was considerably stronger on January Ist last than twelve monts before that date, was not correct.

General Maurice is a man of fine record and it was not to be thought that his statements would be ignored,

There is no doubt that ministers o the Lloyd-George Government have made enemies among the chiefs of the ermy and some of the higher officials son and of Jellicoe caused comment which has not yet subsided. But no one has yet arisen with the hardihood adian treasury eighty-nine per cent. of to say that in any changes made there was any other consideration than the taken strong action to control dealers best interests of the Empire and the Also it is well recognized that if mem silent on questions affecting the dispo sition or make-up of the military for ces, or even gave to the public answers did not always represent a frank and full statement there was more be hind such a policy than a wish to mis

Complaints similar to those agains cellor of the British Exchequer have en made in every country engaged in this war and probably will continue to be made. In such times, and under such conditions, hasty criticism flourishes and it is probably true to say spatches thinks by now that if he were in control of affairs he would not folhowever that the conflict in which the Empire has been engaged since August has been meeting in this city for the on fire and which caried a gun and Ath, 1914, has no precedent and that the men directing that conflict on behalf of the Allies represent the acme of statesmanship and military skill. The best brains in the world are working with but one object—to score such a wictory over the embattled might of Prussian militarism that world peace will reign supreme for generations. There will always be critics, and often criticism may be helpful, but the criticism may be helpful, but the criticism that confines itself to finding fault without offering as well valuable suggestions for improvement will destroy more than it will build.

If from his ripe experience General honor of the menters of the currie charges. These charges affect the menters of importance in that some matters of importance in the supposed the government would act at the first opportunity have not been dealt with.

There is the matter of the Currie charges affect the summantion.

If from his ripe experience General honor of the most important officer of Maurice felt that the war was not be the Legislature and it would certainly Maurice felt that the war was not being properly conducted, or that essential information was being kept from the public without a good national reason for such a policy the patriotic course for him would have been to ing that as yet no selection had been made. course for him would have been to communicate with the premier. Then, if his advice had been disregarded, he at least would have done his duty. But to make public sensational charges of a character that might well create distruct and dissension at a time when confidence in the established authority and a determination to work with that authority until the desired end has been attained is absolutely necessary, appears to be most ill-advised even if it cannot be called unpatrictic and un-British. The triumph of Lloyd-George and his Government will be hailed with foy throughout the Empire and the world.

Then there is the administration of the house. Put a service flag with its star in the front window where everybody can see it. Set a ledge card somewhere so it may tell everybody you are in line doing your time to have a garden or chickens in the back yard as your contribution in the notice of Minister of Health Act.
