

INSPECTOR HERE FOR HAY AND GRAIN

Conference With Grain Commission Has Desired Result for St. John

WEST SIDE MAN Friends of James Armstrong Will Present His Claims for New Position. Members of Board Pleased With Elevator Facilities Here.

As a result of the conference between the board of trade and the grain commissioners who were in the city yesterday it has been decided that St. John shall have its permanent grain inspector next winter. It will be the duty of this official to inspect the hay as well as all the grain shipped from this port.

The supervision of hay shipments was not among the duties of the inspector who had hitherto been summoned from Montreal to St. John on special occasions. The need of such additional inspection is evidenced by the fact that a great many complaints have been made by London and Liverpool importers of hay that a quality of this product inferior to that bargained for has frequently been shipped from St. John.

The grain commission, consisting of Chairman Robert Magill, J. P. Jones and C. Howe, the engineer, has been making an extensive tour of the dominion. The commissioners arrived yesterday morning from Halifax and left in the evening for Montreal, where Commissioner Jones said there was not much work remaining to be done.

They were met at the station by members of the board of trade, with whom they conferred during the morning. They were entertained to luncheon at the Union Club, after which they made an inspection of the grain elevators and spent the early part of the afternoon at Courtenay Bay. Mayor Frink and Commissioner Schofield were guests at the luncheon.

The commissioners said that the elevators of this city were well up to the standard in other cities of the dominion and made special mention of the fine modern elevator now under construction by the C. P. R. which is rising to a completion at the rate of about six feet a day.

The headquarters of the commissioners are in Fort William. Their powers are similar to those of the railway commission, having 300 inspectors under their control and no fewer than 2,500 elevators to inspect throughout the dominion.

Friends of James Armstrong, C. P. R. grain clerk of this city, will probably press his claim for the position of train inspector here.

SALISBURY ITEMS

Salisbury, June 28—Mrs. Charles McCarthy, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. A. E. Treiter, here, returned to her home in Moncton yesterday evening.

Arthur Kendall, of Worcester (Mass.), the guest here of Captain and Mrs. W. Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Francis are enjoying a short vacation driving first class friends at the Glades, Forest Glen and Petticoat. They will spend Sunday at Petticoat, and on Monday, following Pastor Addison's appointments and Mr. Addison will preach on the Salisbury field.

Miss Nettie Carter, who a short time ago graduated with high honors from the Worcester (Mass.) training school for nurses, arrived in Salisbury Thursday morning for a few weeks' visit with her father, Captain J. W. Carter.

WELSFORD NOTES

Welsford, June 24—A delightful dance was given in the Opelka club rooms on Friday evening by the officers and members of the Opelka Club.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Gregg returned from the Methodist conference in Charlottetown on Sunday evening.

Master Fred Whitley has returned home from Rothsay, where he has been attending school, to spend the summer with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Nason and young son are spending a few days at the home of Mrs. Nason.

Mrs. James Donald, who has been visiting the winter with her daughter, Mrs. John Edgett, at Moncton, returned yesterday to spend the summer with her daughter here, Mrs. Fred C. Coffey.

No Mourner Left.

(Harper's Magazine.)

"I ate a worm," said the little tot in kindergarten.

The teacher, thinking that perhaps the kid had really done such a thing, protested warmly over the undesirability of proceeding. "Why, just think," she said, as a final argument, "how madly my mamma would feel to have her little boy eat a worm."

"I ate the mamma, too," was the unimpaired rejoinder that proved too much for the teacher.

Disraeli's Way.

(From the Indianapolis News.)

Disraeli could be brief and bitter, but could also be brief and diplomatic. More who claimed acquaintance with him interpreted a book, and straightway a copy to the statesman, hoping to receive a criticism from him which would be with the book. He was, however, quite unable to determine whether the reply was a compliment or an insult. Simply said: "I shall waste no time reading the book you have so kindly sent me."

fskin	0.17	0.18
epskin (one dealer's)	0.80	1.10
epskin (another)	0.80	1.25
dealer's price)	0.80	0.30
ings	0.15	0.20
low	0.00	0.05
ol (unwashed)	0.14	0.15
ol (washed)	0.22	0.24

REMARKABLE CASE OF RESUSCITATION

Toronto Boy Given Up for Dead Brought Back to Life

Rescued From Bottom of Lake by Chum in Lifeless State, Doctor and Nurses Worked Heroically With Aid of Pulmotor and After Nine Hours He Showed Signs of Revival and Two Hours Later Was Practically Himself.

Toronto, June 28—It seemed almost miraculous—a return of the dead to life. Believed for some three hours to be dead, Jim Hector, a Toronto boy, living at 5 VanKoughnet street, unexpectedly revived on the steamer Turbulina, which was bringing him back to Toronto last night, was taken home, and at midnight was reported to be practically entirely recovered.

The lad owes his life twice over to the heroic young comrade who, at the risk of his own life, finally rescued him from under the water at Grimsby Beach, where he had remained cramp-tied and unconscious for several minutes, and to the assistance of two trained nurses, continued unceasingly to work over his life in efforts for resuscitation, and three hours after it was believed life was extinct.

Went on Church Picnic.

Young Hector accompanied the excursion of the Western Congregational church yesterday to Grimsby Beach. Shortly before 2 o'clock in the afternoon, while departing himself at bathing, he dived from a raft at a point where the water is believed to be about ten feet deep.

For several moments his young comrades waited, but the boy did not come to the surface. Then Gordon Blenkarn, a plucky youth, residing at 324 Queen street west, who is an expert swimmer, dived to the rescue. Once Blenkarn came to the surface, and immediately signalled his comrades to come to his aid. The anxious watchers declared was nearly three minutes, Blenkarn again came to the surface, much exhausted, and this time clutching the inert body of Hector. Helping hands secured both youths and hurried them ashore at Hamilton for a doctor.

Blenkarn, beyond exhaustion, was soon himself again, but no sign of life could be developed in Hector. He was carried to the auditorium at the Beach, and the services of Dr. Fairfield, who was fortunately in the vicinity, were hurriedly requisitioned. Giving up the hope of the sending to Hamilton for a pulmotor and trained assistance, the physician set diligently to work upon the apparently lifeless body of the boy. Four after hours the doctor worked his efforts augmented by the arrival of the pulmotor and two trained nurses, but seemed to have no result.

Although life was by this time believed to be hopelessly extinct, physician and nurses continued their efforts. The boy was taken on board the steamer Turbulina, leaving at 7:30 in the evening, accompanied by the indefatigable workers. On the vessel some three hours after he had been given up as dead the first indications of revival startled and gladdened those who were still working and hoping against hope. Then progress was rapid, and ere the vessel reached Toronto consciousness had been restored. Although extremely weak, the boy's revival was assured. There were some 1,500 passengers on the Turbulina, but few knew the grim battle which had been waged with death. On arrival in Toronto the Ellis ambulance, which had been summoned by long-distance message to meet and remove what was expected to be a dead body, received a rapidly reviving young patient in charge of a physician, two nurses and two maids, and took him direct to his home on VanKoughnet street.

The Hector lad, whose remarkable experience has perhaps never before been paralleled, had his leg broken some time ago, and when he dived under the water a sudden cramp set in which tied his limbs and made him powerless. For a few moments he struggled helplessly under the water, and then lost consciousness. He never rose to the surface, and remained at the bottom till the heroic efforts of young Blenkarn located him. The unconscious youth to the surface, and was much exhausted.

The Hector boy is a son of a widow, Mrs. Hector, who lives at 5 VanKoughnet street with two younger sons. When interviewed at her home at 1 o'clock this morning she stated that the boy was resting quietly and Dr. Eby, the family physician, is in attendance. The pastor and Sunday school teacher of the lad followed him to his home and spent a portion of the night with him. The boy was the only member of the family at the picnic, was sleeping when the Globe representative went to his room to see him. Although still weak, he apparently is now quite out of danger.

ST. JOHN MOTOR PARTY SAVED FARMER'S HOUSE

JACK JOHNSON AND WHITE WIFE SAIL FOR FRANCE

Went to Aid of Women Battling the Flames and Succeeded in Their Efforts.

Negro Fighter Took Two Autos Aboard Corinthian—Says He Will Return.

(Special to The Telegraph.)

Sussex, N. B., June 29—While motoring from St. John to camp, Mr. and Mrs. J. Royden Thomson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank White and Colonel Wedderburn had an exciting time and took a hand in quenching a fire which had broken out in a farmer's cottage about twelve miles from the city. They saw the flames shooting from the house and women helplessly endeavoring to check their progress. There were no other men about. The men of the motoring party at once lent a hand and after considerable effort succeeded in extinguishing the blaze. Needless to say the occupants of the house were very thankful.

WINNIPEG BANK CLERK SHOT DEAD BY ANOTHER

HON. MR. LITTLETON IN CRITICAL STATE AFTER OPERATION

Winnipeg, June 29—H. Waldo Webster, aged 20, clerk in the Union Bank street, was fatally wounded by a bullet from a revolver in the hands of his fellow clerk, Walter E. Carr, aged 19.

The two had just got up, still in their pajamas, when Webster started to fool with a revolver. Carr took it from him, and an explosion followed, shattering Webster's head and he died before he could be taken to the hospital.

London, June 28—The Right Hon. Alfred Littleton, Unionist member of parliament for St. George's, Hanover Square, has undergone a serious operation and his condition is critical. He was secretary of state for the colonies in 1906-05.

Rev. J. L. Batty's Farewell Sermon.

Moncton, June 29—Rev. J. L. Batty farewelled to the Central Methodist church in this city tonight and leaves shortly for Winnipeg to become pastor of Zion Methodist church in that city.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S TERM EXTENDED A YEAR

Will Return to Post This Fall

Cable States Duchess Will Accompany Him—Government Orders Reconstruction of Rideau Hall for Occupancy of Their Royal Highnesses.

(Special to The Telegraph.)

Ottawa, June 29—The Duke of Connaught likes Canada and is coming back. Today Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, administrator of Canada, received a cable from the secretary of state for the colonies stating that "His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught has accepted an extension of his term of office as governor-general for one year."

The cable also states that his royal highness is likely to return to Canada during the autumn, when it is hoped that Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught will be well enough to accompany him.

A contract for the reconstruction of Rideau Hall has been let to Lyall & Sons, of Montreal, and the announcement means that work will be pushed night and day, that the official residence of the governor-general may be ready for occupation before Christmas. Should the duke and duchess signify their intention of returning before that date other provision will be made for them, probably in the Chateau Laurier Hotel at Ottawa.

H. R. H. DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.

SASKATCHEWAN SURVEYORS HELD AT BAY BY WOLVES

The Four Men Had Fired Their Shot When Help Came—Later Two of Them Were Drowned.

(Canadian Press.)

London, June 29—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, led an attacking party to Downing street, which was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.

Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in favor of free speech. She denounced the Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, for "killing my mother." Then she invited the crowd to go to Downing street and "imprison the ministers in their own houses."

Stiffing her action to her words she jumped from the wagon, organized a large body of sympathizers, many of whom were dock workers, and marched at their head down Whitehall with the flag of the Women's Social and Political Union surmounted by a liberty cap.

The police, however, had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled.

A lively battle.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages in which both policemen and women were injured.</