

How he occupied his time while in China is summed up in this brief statement gleaned from an old letter:—

“I found when I got there that I could not do anything that would make it an object to stay, so I employed my time collecting curiosities and studying their manners.”