

I thought over it when I returned and this little card is the outcome. I hope you will accept it as a sincere expression of my good will and pleasure at the honor which has come to you and which you so well deserve. I have always hoped to some day see you premier ever since I was so much impressed by the high ideals expressed in your beautiful tribute "the secret of Herison". I don't know whether politics tends towards the cultivation of high ideals or not, I am rather doubtful, but I am sure with congratulations ³³⁴⁷² that I felt it might be a kindness to spare him, and I did it considering that I knew Mr King intimately enough to have the honor of being included among his personal friends. Mr Killoran replied "I wrote him and received a very cordial reply from Mr King and I think he would appreciate congratulations from you for I remember when he was last in Scotland he told me that he would like to meet you, I wish you would write him"
