It is essentially a family book, and its advice in a moment of sudden illness may be the means of saving a valuable life. This great work is sent absolutely free on receipt of stamps to defray the cost of mailing and customs only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper binding, or 50 stamps for cloth covers. Water Valuable in Venice.
In Venice water is somewhat of a luxury, as the inhabitants have to depend upon the rains, and there is no company for supplying the city. The water for drinking and domestic uses is collected in subterranean reservoirs, where it is said to be filtered. It is doled out at the public wells, which are open one hour daily for that purpose, and then are carefully locked up.

Give Lemons Air.
To keep lemons, let them lie loosely, uncovered on a wire tray that will permit circulation of air on all sides and underneath. Keep them in a dry and cool room.

The Goat.
Originally the common or domestic goat was a native of the highlands of Asia. Naturalists generally regard it as having descended from an animal found in the Caucasus mountains and the hill country of Persia, called in the Persian language the pesang.

Boiled Fish.
There is nothing more difficult to serve neatly than a boiled fish. Do not cut the portions, but carefully separate them where the flakes are joined.

Dagobert's Throne.
The throne of King Dagobert, who reigned in the seventh century, is in the cabinet des Medailles at the French National Library. Dagobert's throne, which is of brass work, was forged and chased by St. Eloi for King Dagobert.

Snakes.
Of the 165 kinds of snakes found in the United States and twenty are venomous. They are the copperhead and water moccasin, which are closely related; the coral snakes of the south; west, the two species of sistrurus and the fifteen species of rattlesnake. The most dangerous of them, the water moccasin, is not seen north of Tennessee.

Lava.
Lava expands in passing from a liquid to a solid state, the gas in the liquid mass being violently expelled.

Goose Legislation.
Under Henry V. an act of parliament ordered all the geese in England to be counted, and the sheriffs of the counties were required to furnish six arrow feathers from each goose.

The Spitz Dog.
The rather dangerous breed of dogs called Spitz or Pomeranian dogs, a variety of Eskimo, were first bred in Pomerania, Prussia, but the popular name of Spitz was probably derived from the erroneous notion that they originated in Spitzbergen.

Greek Sultides.
Ajax killed himself with his spear. Jocasta, Antigone, Haemon, Eurycleia, Oedipus and many other Greek heroes and heroines died by their own hands.

A Poplar That Does Not Seed.
It does not seem to be generally known that the Lombardy poplar never seeds. It is simply a variety of another poplar and has to be increased wholly from cuttings. The pollen bearing form, so far as known, is not in this country. The plant is wholly pistillate.

A Matter of Temperature.
Speaking generally, wild creatures inhabiting hot countries are more savage than those of cold or temperate countries.

The Cutty.
It is not generally known that the word cutty as applied to a species of clay pipe very much used is a corruption of Kutach, a city in Asia Minor, where a species of soft white stone is found which is exported by the Turks to Germany for the manufacture of tobacco pipes.

Mexico.
Mexico has been estimated to contain 479 square leagues of forests, 18,134 square leagues of mountain land and 4,822 square leagues of uncultivated land.

The Tongue.
A big tongue indicates frankness; a short tongue, dissimulation; a long and broad tongue, garrulity and generosity; a narrow tongue, concentration and talent; a short, broad tongue, garrulity and untruth. The man with a very short and narrow tongue is a liar of true artistic merit.

TRUCK DRIVER AND HORSE

How a Friendly Understanding Developed Between Them.
The friendly relations which often exist between truck drivers and their horses is shown in the story of Chieftain, one of the tales in "Horses Nine," by Sewell Ford. Tim Doyle, the driver, having been left alone in the world, takes up lodgings in the stable. The story runs thus: So for three years or more Chieftain had always had a good night pat on the flank from Tim, and in the morning, after the currying and rubbing, they had a little friendly banter in the way of love slaps from Tim and good natured nosings from Chieftain. Perhaps many of Tim's confidences were given half in jest, and perhaps Chieftain sometimes thought that Tim was a bit slow in perception; but, all in all, each understood the other even better than either realized.

Of course Chieftain could not tell Tim of all those vagrant longings which had to do with new grass and springy turf, nor could he know that Tim had similar longings. These thoughts each kept to himself. But if Chieftain was of Norman blood, a horse whose noble sires had ranged pasture and paddock free from rein or trace, Tim was a Doyle whose father and grandfather had lived close to the good green sod and had done their toll in the open, with the cool and calm of the country to soothe and revive them.

Of such delights as these both Chieftain and Tim had tasted scantily, hurriedly, in youth, and for them in the lapses of the daily grind both yearned each after his own fashion. And, each in his way, Tim and Chieftain were philosophers. As the years had come and gone, toll filled and uneventful, the character of the man had ripened and mellowed, the disposition of the horse had settled and sweetened.

In his earlier days Tim had been ready to smash a wheel or lose one, to demand right of way with profane unctious and to back his word with whip, flat or bale hook. But he had learned to yield an inch on occasion and to use the soft word.

Chieftain, too, in his first years between the poles had sometimes been impatient with the untrained mates who from time to time joined the team. He had taken part in mane biting and trace kicking, especially on days when the loads were heavy and the flies thick, conditions which try the best of horse tempers. But he had steadied down into a pole horse who could set an example that was worth more than all the six foot lashes ever tied to a whipstock.
