Dear Sirs.—A few days ago I was taken with a severe pain and contribution of the cords of my leg, and had to be taken home in a rig. I could not sleep for pain, and was unable to put my foot to the floor. A friend told me of your MINARD'S LINIMENT, and one hour from the first application, I was able to walk, and the pain entirely disappeared.

The Making of a Fashion BURAND WORK IN able Parisienne.

..................... It is hair-past four, the hour of le five o'clocque, in Paris, and Bebe has been brought into the drawingroom to be admired.

she has been playing in the Champs Elysees, has seen Guignol, and held her court of tiny boys under her lavorite chestnut tree, and now, her rosy face peeping out roguishly from the creamy whiteness of her big coalscuttle bonnet—for Mademolselle Bebe is dressed in creamy white from top to toe—the young lady, who is five years of age, is ready for what meed of admiration her mothers friends will give her.

The mother's friends all stand round Bebe, and admire her, and then, with a wealth of technical knowledge which would impress an English dressmaker, admire her clothes. After which ceremony, Bebe and her retinue retire to the nursery.

This home-life does not last very large.

This home-life does not last very long. Bebe, before she is eight years old, has become Mile. Yvonne Marie, The nurse has gone, and Celestine, who used to "thee" and "thou" the child, who never fails in the more cerumonious "yous." or lets "Yvonne" ceremonious "vous," or lets "Yvonne" without, the "mademoiselle" slip past those thin and strictly proper lips of hers. There is a great change in the young lady's—I mean Yvonne's, not Celestine's—outward appearance. appearance nowadays. The wealth of fair curly hair has disap-peared, or rather the curls have, and the hair is brushed grimly back and peared, or rather the curis have, and the hair is brushed grimly back and twisted into an uncompromising pigtail. To-morrow, Yvonne leaves home, where she has been kept severely out of sight for several moths, and goes off to the convent. At the convent school of the Good Sisters of Mary Dolorosa her life will, for the next nine years, be one which will concern her mother strangely little. To English people this sounds odd, almost unnatural on the mother's part, and yet I am inclined to think that English people look at it from a wrong point of view. It must not be forgotten that Yvonne's mother was in her day sent, if not to the same convent, to one precisely like it, and that she knows exactly the life that her daughter is to lead there, exactly the life that her daughter is to lead there.

The bigger girls attempt the fashlons as far as they dare, and as far as the nuns will allow them, and talk even in convent-schools among the pupils will sometimes turn to pomps, young men and other vanities; while from eight to eighteen Yvonne Marie's chiefest preoccupation is the attributions of her fature, husband, and his position in the tion is the attributions of her fature husband, and his position in the world. Outwardly, she is like other schoolgiris. Her pigtalls become less aggressive, and her hair is surreptitiously allowed, or coaxed, to curl as she grows bigger; and with the years, white collars, cuffs and other softening attributes atone for the grim blackness of the cover-all. She also brings back dainty underwear from home by stealth, and wears it, for the pleasure Eve's granddaughters will always take in lawns and laces, in the dormitorles, when she should be sleeping.

Then for about a year comes the severe home-training. Yvonne Marle, who would be playing lawn tennis, golf, and leading a delightful, all-but-out life, if the were an English girl, is put into the hands of a miss or a fraulein, an English or a German governess, or both, whose duty is not so much that of resolvers.

governess, or both, whose duty is not so much that of teaching Yvonne anything as of varnishing her with a number of small accomplishments. There is a curlous want of logic in this system, but I am describing what invariably happens. The chief occupation of Miss or Fraulein (she is called Mademoiselle Miss sometimes) is to steer Yvonne, under the strictest of duennaship into the strictest of duennaship, into outer precincts of the world of fashion. She is taken to concerts, and to theatres—some theatres. She is taken to the Avenue du Bols de Boulogne, but on foot, not in a carriage, and she goes to courses of plano lessons, flower painting, and what not.

During the whole of this time, ever buring the whole of this time, ever since babyhood in fact. Yvonne has hardly spoken to a youthful member of the other sex, except by stealth. Now, however, as she fast blossoms into womanhood, she is dressed simply, but with careful taste, from head to foot and goes into society of nend to foot, and goes into society of sorts. There are her mother's five o'clocques, and also what are called in France "bals blanes," where, under the Argus eyes of mothers, aunts, etceterae, callow youths dance with Yvonne and her kind, so that they may have some foretaste of the world. There is a flutter in the blanc dovecot whenever any older man appears, for he is known to be there for the purpose of inspecting one of the young ladles.

Then, one day Yvonne's mother takes her by the hand and introduces her to her future husband. He may nead to foot, and goes into society of her to her future husband. He may be old, he may be young, he may be good-looking, ugly, commonplace, or clever. These things are no mat-ter of Yvonne's. He is her fiance, and she is perfectly content with him.

Then comes the wedding and the honeymoon, and after these life, with its interests of all kinds, first really begins for Yconne Marie. She until then has really not begun to live, and that perhaps is the real reason why she is grateful to her husband, and why so many marriages in France are happy ones.

(Special.)—There are a score of people in this neighborhood who sufered from Lame Back and other symptoms of Kidney Disease and who are now strong and healthy, thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills. One of the most serious cases cured is that of Mr. Richard Quirk, and in an interview he says:

"I suffered for more than twenty years from Lumbago and Kidney Disease I almost niways had a severe pain in my back, so severe that during intervals for years I was totally unable to work.

"Doctors and medicines gave me little relief, and after ten or twelve years I had almost made up my mind that my trouble was incurable. Then reading of cures by them led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I had not taken half a box before I experienced relief, and after using seven or eight boxes I was a perfect sure and a new man. The cure was permanent,"

The Sons of Garibaldi

The Sons of Garibaldi.

Italian journals recently announced that Ricclotti Garibaldi, the younger son the Garnent warrior, was illuming an extensive trip of exploration by Patagonia. His brother, Menotti, who died the other day, took little interest in politics, although he accepted the place tv a deputy for a time, soon resigned and devoted himself to agriculture in the Campagna Romana. His relations with the royal family were pleasant, and he is even said to have received financial ail from that source. His death recalls the fact that in 1840, a few months before he was born his mother followed her husband into the midst of a battle, and fought her way, revolver in hand, until her horse was shot. She was captured, but managed to escape three days later.
